TAXES ON LOOP PROPERTY SHY BY $10,000,000

Third of Levy for 1929 Delinquent.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Between a third and two-fifths of the property owners in the central business district have not paid the taxes on their lands and buildings for the year of 1929.

J. B. McDONOUGH. [Tribune Photo.]

This property is said to be the most valuable square mile and a half in America, with one exception. The total 1929 levy on it was $31,434,075. On the penalty date, May 15, only $19,827,- had been paid. There consequently remains $10,606,175 in delinquent loop real estate taxes against which is accruing a monthly penalty of [illegible].

Figures from County Treasurer.

These figures were made public yesterday by County Treasurer J. B. McDonough, and the area referred to is the square mile of real estate bounded by the lake on the east, the river and its south branch on the north and west, and Roosevelt road on the south.

"Even the richest land owners of property in the most valuable spot in the world, outside of New York, cannot or will not pay their real estate taxes," commented McDonough, "what about the tens of thousands of small home owners, most of them with reduced incomes and many of them out of work?

"The taxes levied on the loop—and I have nothing whatever to do with assessing taxes—have not been increased as much as on other property.

"If the courts reduce the taxes of the loop owners, after other property owners have paid $158,000,000 in taxes, the lawyers and the courts will be stirring up unrest and grumbling which may later lead to serious trouble.

Calls Burden Too Heavy.

"I don't believe that the courts will strike dash out of the small fry and find out of the wealthy land owners; and as I believe that the loop owners would have paid their taxes had they the cash with which to do it. I believe that real estate is paying too much of the taxes, and that the tax burden is too heavy."

The Civic federation, in its latest bulletin, signed by Clayton Mark, president, and Douglas Sutherland, listed 18 bills pending before the legislature which this organization says will increase taxes. The 1929 taxes, due May 15 last, were more than 13 per cent higher than those paid last July. The 1930 taxes, which it is proposed to collect the last of this year, will be 9 per cent higher than those of 1929. The 1931 taxes will be still higher unless something more than talk is utilized to curb expenses.

Consider Tax Bill Today.

The Democratic county central committee is scheduled to meet this morning to urge the passage of house bill No. 52, which revamps the taxing machinery of Cook county.

The McDonough figures on loop real estate tax collections have been looked over by several tax students, and they term them as a "disturbing influence," as one of them phrased it. He pointed out that the city, county, school board, drainage board and park boards are spending money on the basis of the tax levies; and enormous deficits are certain to follow unless the legislature either curbs expenditures or provides much larger revenue.

The tax student looked upon added taxes as the political death of all who impose them and therefore the only way out, in his opinion, is for the state to prohibit the spending of more than two-thirds of the amounts which have been authorized by appropriation.

Personal Taxes Lag.

Thought of that kind has been voiced so far by any legislator or tax leader, and no serious effort has been made to require owners of personal property to pay their share of the taxes. A recital of only what has been done or attempted omits the most interesting and important news of the situation.

Only about two-thirds of the real estate taxes of the loop have been paid. The percentage delinquent is

TROOPS RUSHED TO VANDALIA AS FOUR ARE SHOT

Guards Halt Break at Barbwire.

BY PERCY WOOD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Vandalia, Ill., May 25, 3 a. m.—More than 500 prisoners, four of whom were shot, rioted on the state penal farm here last night, set fire to five buildings, and for more than an hour battled armed guards with fists, stones and clubs.

The mutiny occurred when four inmates crawled through the barbed wire stockade surrounding the farm and were fired on by concealed guards who had received word of the planned flight. Three of the quartet were felled with small shot.

Word of the shooting spread quickly through the encampment-like prison, and within a few minutes the five structures, four of which were dormitories and the fifth the dining hall, were set ablaze. In the melée the fourth prisoner was wounded.

Citizens Help to Foil Escape.

Alarm sirens and bells were sounded, bringing additional guards to the scene. Scores of townsfolk in Vandalia, a mile away, sped to the farm and added themselves to the protective cordon surrounding the prison to prevent a delivery. Shortly afterward the guards were augmented by forty state highway officers and still later by Company I of the Illinois National Guard, out of Salem, commanded by Capt. Owen Adams.

The individual causes of the riot, the men who made a momentary escape, were Charles J. Rogers, sentenced from Kane county for eleven months for larceny; William Simonds, sentenced from Winnebago county for one year for assault; Arthur Ragan, sentenced from Kankakee county for ninety days for larceny, and Charles Lewis, sentenced from McDonough county for sixty days for passing bogus checks.

Second Riot Since April.

The disorders were the second at the Vandalia farm since April 12. On this latter date seven men tried to scale the barbed wire barriers. Two men were wounded and caught. The others got away. The troubles at that time were considered as an echo of the more serious disturbances in other Illinois penal institutions, notably at Joliet and Stateville penitentiaries and the Chester asylum for the criminal insane, which resulted in killings, injuries, and fires.

For the most part the inmates at the Vandalia farm are regarded as tractable, and for that reason are confined here rather than at an actual penitentiary. The prison farm here consists of nine dormitories, similar to army barracks, has a large cultivable tract, and is surrounded by a series of barbed wire stockades. Windows in the various buildings are not barred. Only minor offenders are consigned here.

It was about 7:30 o'clock that Rogers and his companions gathered for their plotted getaway. They did not know, however, that C. J. Metzger, superintendent of the institution, had been aware for weeks of the project. Because of his information, Supt. Metzger had assigned five guards armed with shotguns at vantage points.

Sprinkled with Bird Shot.

The four men crawled through and under the wire barriers. At the outside they were called upon to halt. They bolted. Several shots were fired and three of the men fell, sprinkled with bird shot. None was seriously hurt.

The shots roused the 500 or more prisoners in the inclosure, many of whom knew of the projected flight and who realized that it had failed. They called to friends. Several tore their bedding loose and carried it into the dining hall. There they applied matches, and in a few moments the structure was ablaze.

As guards ran into the grounds they were met by stones and other missiles. Despite their threats to fire, the guards again were attacked. Several fist fights occurred, and a few prisoners were felled with blows from revolver butts.

Meantime fiery torches were applied to the other buildings, and the flames, dancing high in the air, lent a lurid glare to the raging mobs which moved to every section of the inclosure.

Firemen from Vandalia under Capt. C. A. Higgins arrived but could not penetrate more than twenty yards into the farm because of stones and other articles hurled at them. In another section Chief of Police C. A. Hubbard of Vandalia led a group of his men into the yard. He was knocked down by a stone hurled by a prisoner and carried out. Metzger attempted to

THAT CUTE LITTLE PET IS GROWING UP

MRS. DIXON IS PUT OUT ABOUT BEING PUT IN

Mrs. Betty Dixon, 30 years old, of 158 North Central avenue, was driving at 45 miles an hour on Lake Shore drive—so it is alleged—last evening when Lincoln Park Policeman Frank Lewis ordered her to halt at Eugenie street.

Informing her she was under arrest, he commanded her to follow him to the park police headquarters at Clark and Center streets. On the way Mrs. Dixon turned her car from North avenue into Dearborn parkway and sped south—so it is alleged—at 70 miles an hour in an attempt to escape.

Lewis pursued and caught up when a stream of traffic in Chicago avenue forced Mrs. Dixon to slow down. Instead of telling her to follow, the policeman escorted her on foot to the Chicago avenue police station. There Mrs. Dixon announced in a determined voice that she was a friend of Mayor Cermak and that all the policemen thereabouts were going to be demoted and transferred unless she was freed at once.

CAROL'S FAMILY EXCLUDES HELEN; BAN FETE FOR HER

BUCHAREST, Rumania, May 24.—(AP)—The tangled affairs of King Carol and Princess Helen, his divorced wife, took a new dramatic twist today when the official Zaranist party newspaper, Patria, said the mother of Crown Prince Michael was to be excluded from membership in the royal family.

The paper disclosed that War Minister Stephanescu has issued a special order to certain regiments forbidding them to observe the annual celebration of Helen's saint day next Thursday. The reason given was that a special law is being prepared for the new parliament in which Helen will learn she has been excluded from the Rumanian Hohenzollern dynasty and thus is not entitled to honors which are accorded only to the royal family.

It is expected that the decree of exclusion will be promulgated as soon as parliament assembles and that Helen will leave the country permanently.

Killed for Playing Radio at 11 O'Clock at Night

Taylorville, Ill., May 24.—[Special.]—Bernard Grigsby, a barber, who was shot last night for playing his radio at 11 p. m., died tonight. Albert Bores, who lives in the apartment over the shop and who called on Grigsby to complain, is in jail. He told police he shot in self-defense.

Widow Haunts Showup; Picks Out Murderer

For nearly two months Mrs. Alice Costello, 8101 Vincenes avenue, made it her duty to attend all the police showups. It was a task she set herself after her husband was shot and killed in a holdup on March 28.

Twice a week she went to the detective bureau and looked at long lines of crime suspects. In addition she had requested that whenever the police made raids and caught large numbers of wrongdoers they would call her, night or day. She viewed some hundreds of prisoners without success.

But yesterday she stood up and pointed at a man in the showup line.

"That's the one who killed my husband," said Mrs. Costello. "I could never forget him."

Two Others Confirm It.

She had indicated Dominic Pantaleo, 24 years old, 833 South Morgan street, leader of a band of robbers. Later two men who had seen the shooting of Patrick Costello in his soft drink parlor at 414 West 79th street, summoned to the Maxwell street station by Assistant State's Attorney Nat Ruvell, confirmed the identification. They are Kendrick Tiffany, 7623 Eggleston avenue, and Edward Rapp, 6408 Aberdeen street.

Costello, his wife and five customers were in the soft drink parlor when three robbers, two carrying shotguns, entered. No resistance was offered, but one of the bandits, apparently out of sheer nervousness, shot Costello after he had been ordered to stand with the others against a wall.

Find Weapons in His Home.

Questioned by Prosecutor Ruvell, Pantaleo told conflicting stories. He first said that he lived with an uncle, Anthony Pantaleo, at 1102 South Paulina street, and that he had been with his cousin, Jennie Pantaleo, on the evening of the Costello murder. But his relatives repudiated his statements and a raid on his real home revealed weapons and stolen property.

At the bureau of identification it was found that Pantaleo had been sent to the county jail, under the name of Charles Ranelli, in March of 1929, to serve a year's term for larceny. He was identified also as the perpetrator of four recent robberies.

Seized with Three Companions.

With three companions he was taken into custody at 14th and Solon streets on Saturday by Detective Sergeants William Clancy and Bert Haslen. In the automobile the four men occupied were two pistols. None of the other prisoners, James Nuzzo, 934 Polk street; John Carrino and Maurice Tampanero, both of 1307 Elburn avenue, were identified in the Costello case, but they were pointed out by other robbery victims.

When first put into a cell after Mrs. Costello had named him a killer, Pantaleo strove to destroy chances of further identification by bruising his face against the bars. This form of disguise was insufficient to prevent the men witnesses from identifying him.

Tries to Hang Himself.

After these witnesses had made their statements the accused man was again locked up. He attempted to hang himself with his suspenders. This effort was discovered in time to prevent his death, and he was then put in a padded cell.

Parks His Car in Loop; Finds It Sadly Changed

Frank W. Campbell, a salesman who lives at 5110 Kenwood avenue, left a movie yesterday afternoon and walked back to where he had parked his automobile on Wells street between Randolph and Lake streets. He had some difficulty finding the car, for while he was at the show thieves had stolen its top, the windshield, the spotlight, and most of the other accessories, changing the appearance of the automobile to such an extent that Campbell hardly recognized it.

Mayors Burst Into Song as Liquor Flows

BY EGBERT SWENSON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BAGNOLES DE L'ORNE, France, May 24.—American newspaper men, who are accompanying the twenty-one American mayors on their tour of France since their arrival at Havre three days ago, are placing bets tonight on how long the executives' inner linings will be able to stand the present rate of French liquid hospitality.

Little "flyers" are also being taken on the question of whether Mayor John C. Porter of Los Angeles, Cal., who refused to drink champagne in toasts to the presidents of the United States and France, will eventually weaken in the midst of this flood of good liquor and take that drink he has so far steadfastly spurned.

Drinking Starts at 11 A. M.

The Los Angeles mayor has already developed considerable grace in hoisting a glass in toast, although the liquor has never touched his lips. He is also acquiring the technique of cuddling a glass of port wine and twirling thin stemmed champagne glasses familiarly.

The daily drinking program, so far, offers a minimum of three glasses of champagne, two aperitifs, two bottles of red wine, two bottles of white wine, two after-meal liqueurs, one long beer, and assorted drinks in between.

The imbibing begins at 11 a. m. at this or that city hall, when a toast of welcome is drunk in champagne or port wine. Then comes the pre-lunch aperitif and at least one red and white wine with lunch, followed by cognac and coffee.

The afternoon is usually interrupted by another champagne toast or two. Then the pre-dinner cocktails, red and white wine at dinner followed by champagne, cognac and coffee. The evening ends at about midnight with a cool beaker of beer.

Revive Drinking Songs.

But this is only the minimum. At last night's dinner at Deauville, for instance, there was offered an accompaniment of 1850 port, one white and two red wines, and champagne, 1830 cognac, and 1850 brandy. The feast finished after midnight.

One noticeable result of this gay program is a revival of the old American drinking songs as the buses carry the delegation from town to town. The mayors gaily dispense "Sweet Adeline," "How Dry I Am," "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here," "Hinky Dinky Parley Voo," wave hats and call bland "hellos" to the gaping villagers as they roar through.

Judge Frank N. Padden of Chicago, who joined the touring mayors a day or two ago, figured in an amusing incident at Deauville yesterday. He was responding to a toast by Mayor Eugene Colas, who was wearing a high ceremonial derby, when the American mayors burst out:

"Where did you get that hat, O! you lucky devil?"

The mayor of Deauville stopped and after the song was translated into French, cried "It goes with the job."

FALLS 70 FEET, GOES OVER DAM, BUT WILL LIVE

Denver, Colo., May 24.—(AP)—Miss Helen Stone toppled from a cliff at Eldorado Springs and fell seventy feet into Boulder creek.

Then she was carried over a 20 foot dam.

She was sucked into a whirlpool below the dam.

The current then whirled her 75 feet downstream. Her body came to rest on some rocks in midstream, where it was found by searchers.

Today at a Denver hospital physicians said she had suffered concussion of the brain, but would recover.

HARD LIQUORS' DRINKING GAINS, RECORDS SHOW

Only Consumption of Beer Decreases.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 24.—[Special.]—Prohibition America is spending nearly three billions of dollars a year on intoxicating liquors, according to a report of the research department of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment made public today.

"The illicit liquor business," says the report, "has become one of America's major industries. We have conservatively estimated that as a nation we are now spending annually $2,848,000,000 for intoxicating beverages, or about $8,000,000 a day. Our expenditures for drink now equal our total expenditures for other leading commodities.

"The wholesale value of all passenger automobiles in 1929 was $2,793,166,812. The total value of the retail purchases of gasoline in 1929 was $2,954,077,980. The total output of our steel mills, according to the United States census of manufactures in 1929, was valued at $3,356,894,259."

Only Beer Consumption Less.

Under prohibition, the association finds, the consumption of both hard liquor and wine has increased. "Prohibition can be credited only with a reduction of beer consumption," says the report.

The per capita consumption of spirits in 1914 was 1.44 gallons, in 1929 it was 1.65 gallons, according to the association, while wine increased in consumption from .5 gallons to .9 gallons. Beer consumption fell from 20.69 gallons to 6.5 gallons.

Whisky that retails for $3 a quart and 75 cents a drink in speakeasies represents but a small fraction of the hard liquor consumption, says the report. Most of the drinking population is paying $11 a gallon for spirits, a finding reminiscent of the Wickersham commission's report that "whisky of good quality is obtainable substantially everywhere at prices not extravagant for persons of means." The average cost of beer the association found to be 50 cents a gallon and of wine $2.30 a gallon.

How Drink Bill Grows.

Consumption of spirits in 1929 is estimated in the report at 200 million gallons, wine 110 million gallons, and beer 790 million gallons.

Altogether, there has been a billion dollars a year increase in the drink bill of the nation under prohibition, as set forth in the following comparison:

	1914.	1929.
Spirits	663,000,000	2,200,000,000
Malt liquors	1,032,000,000	395,000,000
Wines	124,000,000	253,000,000
Totals	1,818,000,000	2,848,000,000

"The great increase in net expenditures for hard liquor, an increase of over 300 per cent, is most significant," says the report. "It is in this end of the industry that bootleggers, rum runners and speakeasy proprietors figure most prominently. Graft and corruption of public officials are most prevalent in connection with the hard liquor industry. Beer and wine making are now largely home industries. Indeed, wine making for home consumption is within the law. Expenditures for wine and beer, however, are relatively unimportant in the nation's drink bill, both as to amount and as to the profits which outlaws and criminals derive from this form of the traffic."

Find Seizures No Deterrent.

The seizure of the property of illicit liquor makers and dealers which was valued at $29,000,000 last year and the imposition of fines which amounted to $5,000,000 constitute no deterrent upon the traffic, according to the report, as they amount to only a two per cent overhead.

The inquiry disclosed no appreciable falling off in the demand for liquor as a result of the business depression.

"It is likely," says the report, "that receipts in expensive speakeasies have fallen off and that the revenue of bootleggers catering to the expensive trade has been somewhat reduced. Since, however, the bulk of liquor used is made at home or bought from neighborhood bootleggers, the depression has probably had little effect in reducing the total drink bill."

Hops, Grain Market Curtailed.

The shift produced by prohibition from a beer drinking to a wine and whisky drinking country has wrought a change in the market for liquor materials.

"Formerly the brewing industry," says the report, "required large quantities of barley, hops, and other grains. The reduction in beer production and consumption largely has curtailed this market. On the other hand, the vast increase in hard liquor production and the increase in the wine industry have stimulated the use of many of our agricultural products. We estimate that in 1929, 27 million bushels of corn, 754,000,000 pounds of cane and beet sugar, and 30,000,000 gallons of molasses were used in the production of hard liquors. The manufacture of beer resulted in the consumption of 21,290,000 bushels of barley and 16,000,000 pounds of hops. The wine industry used 714,009 tons of grapes."

Gangsters' Excess Profit.

The association was unable to determine "how much of the present drink bill goes to excessive profits of gangsters and gunmen."

"One thing is certain—practically none of the money spent for drink is collected by our federal and state governments in taxes," the report states. "It is true that the bureau of internal revenue collects some income taxes from a few of the larger bootleggers, but we believe that most of them escape payment on any considerable portion of their incomes. Even if they all paid income taxes, however, such taxes would in no sense be comparable with the excise taxes paid by the old industry, because formerly the excise and license taxes were taken out of the industry before profits were paid.

"While it is impossible to determine accurately the margin of profit in the illicit trade, our comparison of the 1914 and 1929 drink bills indicates that the present trade has a bonus of over $1,300,000,000. How much of this goes to excessive profits, how much is used as a fund for corrupting public officials or to finance other forms of crime are matters of mere conjecture.

Audit of Capone Books.

"In an address delivered in Chicago on May 18, 1931, United States Attorney George E. Q. Johnson declared that the total income of Al Capone's gang for the period from 1925 to 1928 was $6,077,460.15, an average annual income of $1,519,365. The profits for 1928 were $1,641,979. Presumably, United States Attorney Johnson got his figures from a government audit of Capone's books. How many Chicago industries can show such profits during the same period?"

ARREST 2 FLYERS FOR BREAKING AIR TRAFFIC RULES

Two aviators were arrested yesterday by Morton Grove county highway police for stunt flying and zooming at the request of Maj. Reed Landis, air ace and aviation police director for the county.

The pilots are Erich Paselk, 17 years old, 5824 Kenton avenue, and Charles Moran, 35 years old, of Glenview.

Charges against Paselk were flying without a license, stunting over Sky Harbor airport, and scaling low over hangars. He was released on $2,500 bond. Moran is employed as a pilot at the Curtiss-Wright field at Glenview. He is charged with zooming and endangering crowds. He was released on $100 bond. Their cases will come up in the justice court at Morton Grove Thursday.

Maj. Landis said the arrests were part of a drive of county authorities to discourage reckless flying. Sheriff Meyering is determined to halt reckless flying in Cook county, Maj. Landis said, and is preparing to employ four or five deputies toward that end.

LEGION SUBMITS REPORT FOR ARMY OF 165,000 MEN

A proposed resolution calling upon the United States to maintain a peace-time regular army of 165,000 enlisted men, and to provide for the rapid manufacture of munitions in national arsenals, was presented yesterday by the National Defense committee at the third executive meeting of the Illinois department of the American Legion.

In the proposed resolution, it is demanded that the regular government arsenals maintain in peace times a nucleus of trained workmen who could, in event of war, instruct private manufacturers in the making of munitions.

The report also asks the expansion of the National Guard to 210,000 enlisted men, expansion of the officers' reserve corps to at least 120,000 men, the development of tanks and airplanes, and the establishment and maintenance of a reserve training corps at each qualified educational institution desiring it.

CAPITAL'S CRIME WAVE IS LAID TO BOOZE AND GRAFT

Chicago Area Congressmen Discuss Situation.

Members of congress from the Chicago area yesterday blamed the Republican administration and about everybody and everything else connected with the federal government, except themselves, for the wave of lawlessness in Washington.

Graft, corruption, and scofflawry run rampant through the administration of the capital, several agreed. One or two hinted of fortunes mysteriously acquired in Washington by certain congressmen, but most of them asked the question, "Who gets the graft money?", became evasive or pleaded lack of information. A minority said that nothing at all is wrong with Washington.

Nine Give Their Views.

Eight representatives and one senator were asked their views on dispatches of the last few days showing the capital to be in the throes of a crime wave so serious that the citizens have talked of drafting outside help to curb it. United States District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson, because of his success in prosecuting Chicago gangsters, was mentioned in one report as being discussed for the crime fighting job.

"I haven't heard anything about it officially," Mr. Johnson said yesterday. "I have just started a new term here and I am so busy I hardly think a change is contemplated now."

Lewis Hits Federal Control.

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, one of those interviewed on the Washington crime situation, declared frankly that he considered the attempt of the federal government to run the municipality of Washington a failure.

"Except for a handful who live there, the members of congress concern themselves very little with Washington affairs," he said. "I have heard of one or two who are said to have made a good deal of money in real estate and a good many are interested in patronage but, on the whole, they consider Washington a sort of orphan child."

Senator Lewis smiled broadly at the mention of prohibition law enforcement in the capital.

The Diplomatic Immunity.

"Imagine yourself a citizen of Washington," he said. "At the embassies around your corner you see the glasses sparkling and the mugs foaming. Several thousand diplomats and attaches drink all they want.

"If you rank well in society maybe you are invited over to drink yourself. Yet if you try it at home they can put you in the penitentiary. Do you wonder that Washingtonians are scofflaws?"

Senator Lewis said he believed the people of Washington should be given some voice in their own government. A plan could be worked out, in his opinion, whereby the city could be governed by a council of citizens, some of whom would be elected.

Where Responsibility Lies.

Each of the congressmen interviewed admitted that the responsibility for the District of Columbia government now rests with the President and congress. Congress enacts all municipal legislation and, through its committees, controls appropriations.

The actual city executives are three commissioners, appointed by the President and confirmed by the senate. The commissioners in turn appoint city department heads.

"The congressmen, except those on District committees, have next to nothing to do with the government," asserted Representative James T. Igoe, Democrat, of Chicago. "President Hoover said Washington should be made a model of law enforcement. It is exactly the opposite.

"Chicago is clean compared to Washington. There are speakeasies and gambling houses all over the capital. At one club the first floor is for the hoodlums and the second for the socially elite. Prostitution is rampant and one reason for it is the low pay of some of the girls employed by the government. Liquor can be bought almost without any trouble."

Representative Igoe said he favored giving the people of Washington the right to vote so they could run their own affairs.

A similar picture of the lack of prohibition law enforcement in Washington was painted by Representative Adolph J. Sabath, Democrat, Chicago. The drys in congress, whom he termed "short sighted fanatics," have used the capital as a guinea pig for dry law experiments, with the result that its citizens are rebellious, he said. Washingtonians, like the residents of other cities, Sabath said, "are tired of being humbugged about prohibition."

Britten Blames Dry Law.

Another member of congress who blamed the Washington crime wave on prohibition was Representative Fred A. Britten, Republican, Chicago. He said:

"When one considers only the respective populations of Washington and Chicago, the crime wave now enveloping the capital is far more serious than any crime cycle which has yet visited Chicago. When one realizes that Washington has no appreciable foreign population, and no great industrial activity, but on the contrary, is America's first residential and intellectual center, the present uncontrolled epidemic of murder and law violation is hard to believe.

"Today Washington is filled with liquor joints and murder and burglary are everyday occurrences. Of course impossible prohibition is at the bottom of most of the law violations and this condition will not improve as long as an organized minority of fanatics can force the retention of that unpopular law."

Calls Police Inexperienced.

An "accidental combination of events" explains the Washington reign of crime, according to Representative Carl R. Chindblom, Republican, Chicago. One of these, he said, is the lack of experience of the District police in coping with modern, organized crime, with its victims and suspects who will not talk.

Representative Morton D. Hull, Republican, Chicago, refused to become alarmed over the Washington crime reports which he said he thought had been "dramatized by the press."

"I think the congressional District committees are honest and doing their best," he averred. He added that he had observed few violations of the prohibition or other laws in Washington.

Similar views were expressed by Representative John T. Buckbee, Republican of Rockford, Ill., and Representative John C. Ketcham, Republican, of Hastings, Mich.

Mr. Buckbee said he had faith in the Hoover administration and that he felt the Washington city government is in "very good hands." Ketcham said that his notion was that the crime reports have been "heavily colored" and that the law is being enforced in Washington as well as in any other city in the United States.

"I suppose there was considerable graft and corruption, with congressmen participating, in the old days," commented Representative Frank R. Reid, Republican of Aurora. "I have heard stories about crookedness in the Washington city departments on contracts and patronage but I think all of that is gone now. One of the commissioners is an army man and the army keeps a pretty careful watch on all expenditures."

Reid on District Committee.

Representative Reid is the only congressman from the Chicago metropolitan area who is a member of the District of Columbia committee of the house. He is now the fourth ranking Republican member of that committee.

"Our committee now is working on a plan for closer cooperation between the government and the citizens of Washington," he said. "We had under consideration at the last session a bill to give them partial control over the school board. I think they should have more home rule, although, of course, the government must retain some control.

DR. MAX HUBER, HEAD OF WORLD RED CROSS, ARRIVES HERE TODAY

Dr. Max Huber, member of the permanent court of international justice at The Hague, of which he was president from 1925 to 1927, and president of the international committee of the Red Cross, will arrive in Chicago at 10:10 a. m. today on the Liberty Limited.

Dr. Huber will stay in Chicago for two days, mixing sightseeing with business. He will be the guest of the American Red Cross. On his arrival Dr. Huber will go to the Congress hotel. Later he will visit the Board of Trade, and at noon will be the guest of honor at an informal luncheon given by the Chicago chapter of the Red Cross at the University club.

Tomorrow, following inspection of the stockyards, Dr. Huber will be a guest of the Council on Foreign Relations at a luncheon. In the afternoon he will visit the University of Chicago. He will be received on Wednesday by the faculty of the law school of Northwestern university and at noon will deliver an address at a luncheon of the Chicago Bar association.

GIRL IS KIDNAPED BY MANIAC; HELD CAPTIVE 4 HOURS

Miss Catherine Brennan, 19 years old, 2932 North Melvina avenue, was taken home at 4:30 o'clock yesterday morning after the terrifying experience of being kidnaped and driven around for four hours by a man who said he wanted to wreak vengeance on all women. While walking to her home late Saturday night after alighting from a motor bus, Miss Brennan was struck on the head by the kidnaper and dragged into an old automobile.

Her captor told her, she said, that he had been double-crossed all his life by women, and particularly by his wife, and he was going to get even.

Miss Brennan's arms were black and blue from resisting the kidnaper's attacks. She declared she finally shamed the man by talking about his own daughter when he mentioned he had an 11 year old daughter and a 20 year old son. She said he handed her his revolver and told her to shoot him, but then he snatched it away from her and drove her home after warning her that if she ever identified him she would be killed.

SEVENTH KILLING IN 10 DAYS STIRS WASHINGTON, D.C.

Shakeup in Government May Be Ordered.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 24.—[Special.] — Another murder in Washington's gangland last night has brought the crime situation in the nation's capital to a critical pass. Ten shootings in the underworld and on the upper crust of swanky night life, with the net result of seven corpses, make up the record of the last ten nights.

Rumors are flying tonight of an impending shakeup of the District of Columbia government by President Hoover as a result of the crime wave.

The President announced more than a year ago that he wanted Washington to be a model city in the matter of law enforcement, particularly enforcement of the prohibition law. He wanted the District of Columbia to constitute exhibit A of what could be done by authorities sincerely desirous of stamping out the illicit liquor traffic, so that other communities might profit by the spectacle.

Wanted City as Example.

It was intended that the example of Washington should take the wind out of alibis offered by the authorities of other communities to the effect that the prohibition is unenforceable.

Now it turns out that Washington is alive with speakeasies and that the illicit liquor traffic is in the hands of gangsters as in every other large community, and that the police force is honeycombed with corruption by bootleggers.

One of the most interesting explanations of the failure of the police to stop the flow of liquor into Washington is that the man walking a beat is afraid of interfering with consignments of liquor for high officials of the government. Numerous police men have got themselves into all kinds of trouble by becoming too inquisitive regarding truck loads of Scotch intended for the higher ups of the government.

Bootlegger Latest Victim.

The latest victim of the gangland shootings was Irving Zirkle, a small time bootlegger. The shooting took place in a 9th street pool room, frequented by bootleggers and gangsters.

A commercial photographer, Robert Emmett Martz, was arrested as the killer.

The police are working on the theory that the killing is linked with the recent murder of Jack Cunningham, police informer. It is said that the shot that fatally wounded Zirkle was intended for Vernon W. Hawks, whom the police had released a few hours before the shooting after quizzing him in connection with the shooting of Burt L. Smith in an alleged speakeasy near 12th and I streets, northwest, last Saturday night. Hawks tenaciously maintained that he was not in the speakeasy at the time.

Shot Down Hour Later.

Smith told police he shot himself accidentally, but he was unable to produce the weapon. Later Cunningham is said to have delivered to police of the first precinct the pistol used in the Smith shooting. Within an hour Cunningham was shot down in an alley near his home.

Policeman Clark reported that Hawks and another man were loitering beside a radiator in the poolroom, when Martz walked in, appearing intoxicated. He sauntered over to the radiator, according to the policeman, slapping the face of Hawks and told the latter to "get the hell out of here."

Hawks was walking to the front door in compliance, Policeman Clark reported, when Irving Zirkle walked unconcernedly in front of Martz.

"Martz suddenly whipped out a pistol and fired one shot," the policeman said. "The bullet pierced Zirkle and finally tore a small hole in the coat of another man, Milton Knight, who was standing a short distance back of him."

Zirkle was rushed to Emergency hospital, where he died this morning.

Work on Legation Robbery.

Meanwhile, in an attempt to clear up the slaying of Cunningham, police were working on a theory that the men who participated in the attempt to rob the legation of San Salvador, 2601 Connecticut avenue, May 12, put Cunningham on the spot.

It was pointed out that the guns used to slay Cunningham and in the assault of Dr. Don Carlos Leiva, legation chargé d'affaires, were of the same type and caliber. The police informer is said to have told his wife that he heard men plotting to rob the legation of its liquor and warned them not to attempt the robbery.

Police Obtain Bullets.

The slug which killed Cunningham and a .45 caliber slug found in the walls of the legation after the attack there were turned over to Lieut. John Fowler, police ballistic expert, together with a .45 caliber pistol found by a workman on Lincoln road, northwest. This weapon had been recently discharged. The serial numbers had been filed away hurriedly.

Three Bombs Hurled Into Lisbon Streets; Five Hurt

LISBON, Portugal, May 24.—(AP)—Five persons were seriously injured tonight when three bombs were thrown into the streets from an escalator. The bombers escaped. Two of the explosions occurred in a fashionable shopping center. Armindo Gonsalez, a Spanish merchant, and another man were critically injured. A woman suffered such severe injuries to her leg it had to be amputated.

POPE PROTESTS FREE RELIGION DECREE BY SPAIN

Vatican to Send Strong Note to Republic.

VATICAN CITY, May 24.—(AP)—The Vatican will make strong representations to the Spanish republic against the Friday's religious liberty decree, it was learned tonight.

Church officials are said to consider the decree to be a clear violation of the concordat still in existence between Spain and the Vatican.

This question, as well as the burning of church property and the treatment of priests and nuns in Spain, were understood to have been thoroughly discussed by Pope Pius today during an hour and a half's audience with the Spanish primate, Pedro Cardinal Segura.

Cardinal's Report Kept Secret.

The primate was obliged to leave Spain and arrived in Rome last night. He was met at the station by Msgr. Pacelli, secretary of state's office, and other prelates. Segura talked over the situation with Cardinal Pacelli, secretary of state.

The report which Cardinal Segura made to the pontiff and any decision which the pope may have made were kept secret, except the decision to protest to the Spanish government against the liberty decree, to which the pope gave his immediate approval.

The primate's only public comment as he was a fervent exclamation when he arrived to "pray for Spain."

The future plans of the cardinal were not made public, but he is expected to remain here several days in order to give a full report on conditions in Spain and to confer with officials of the state department regarding the church's course.

Hail Success Catalan Elections.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BARCELONA, May 24.—Col. Francisco Macia's city councils in Catalonia today elected Col. Macia's men to the assembly which is to draft a definitive statute for the government of 1,500,000 Catalans. The voting was peaceful.

Col. Macia, head of the provisional Catalan republic, swept the field in the municipal elections for or against Macia last month, and the pact between Catalan and Castilian conspirators had fall stipulated that the army of Catalonia was to be decided upon by its city councils for attention to parliament. He had no trouble in getting 22 of the total 39 seats filled today. Six more will be filled next week.

But a large section of Catalan opinion will have no representation in the assembly. The so-called Liga, which is still allied with the industrial republic, abstained from the election, seeing it had no chance in the Catalonia assembly. Catalonia's former president party, under Francisco Cambo, also boycotted the elections.

New Party Is Born.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID.—Speaking today before 1,000 followers at the baptism of a new party, to be known as Liberal Republican, Melquiades Alvarez, who long led the struggle to democratize the monarchy, said:

BANDIT HOLDS UP COUPLE IN AUTO; GETS $2,000 RING

Followed by a lone bandit who had trailed them from a loop theater, Miss Myrtle Bayard, 23 years old, and her fiancé, Burt Goldboss, 3218 Sheridan rd., connected with Paine, Webber & Co., brokers, were forced to drive four blocks, after which Miss Bayard was robbed of her $2,000 diamond engagement ring. Goldboss and Miss Bayard were sitting in Goldboss' machine in front of Miss Bayard's home when the bandit jumped on the running board brandishing a gun. He leaped into the car and compelled Goldboss to drive away.

Miss Bayard dropped her ring to the floor of the car during the ride, and when the bandit demanded it she told him she had no ring.

"Don't try to fool me," he said. "I saw it as you came out of the theater."

Threatened with death, she told him she had dropped the ring. The bandit compelled Goldboss to light a match and aid in the hunt for the ring. He declared he did not find it, but after he left the ring was gone.

KIRKLAND JURY TO GET CASE TOMORROW

Allot Twelve Hours to Arguments.

Valparaiso, Ind., May 24.—[Special.]—With his trial entering its final phase tomorrow, Virgil Kirkland spent a restless day in his cell in the Porter county jail here today, counting the hours to the time the lawyers begin their final arguments.

At 9:30 a. m. Deputy Prosecutor Floyd Vance will open with the state's plea to the jury to send Kirkland to the electric chair for the ravishment and murder of his Gary High school sweetheart, Arlene Draves. John Crumpacker, son of the presiding judge, Grant Crumpacker, will open for the defense.

Crumpacker will be followed by his associate, Oscar B. Thiel of Gary, and Edmund J. Freund will then intervene with a renewed plea for death on behalf of the state. Ronald C. Oldham of Chicago, chief of Kirkland's counsel, will close for the defense.

Underwood to Close.

The last word of argument will be spoken by Deputy Prosecutor John Underwood, who directed the prosecution in Kirkland's first trial, when a jury gave him life imprisonment only to have a new trial granted on a technicality.

With each side allotted six hours for argument observers expected the oratory would carry the trial well into Tuesday afternoon, with the jury receiving instructions and retiring to deliberate that evening.

The defense camp is pleased with the word Judge Crumpacker, changing his previously reported intention of submitting only three verdicts—guilty of murder by rape, guilty of rape, and not guilty—would permit the jury to choose between five or six possible verdicts.

Verdicts Jury Will Ponder.

The verdicts likely to be submitted, as enumerated by Attorney Oldham, are murder by rape [carrying the mandatory death penalty], rape, attempted rape, involuntary manslaughter, and acquittal.

Prosecutor Underwood expressed confidence that the jury would accept the state's view of the case that Kirkland ravished the girl, struck her a deadly blow and incited his four companions and co-defendants, Paul Barton, David Thompson, Henry Shirk and Leon Stanford, to rape her also while she was unconscious.

The defense lawyers, while conceding the improbability of an acquittal, were staking their hopes on a verdict carrying a prison penalty. In this connection Attorney Oldham announced he had discovered a statute providing that no minor found guilty of any crime carrying a penalty less than death or life imprisonment could be given any sentence above the indeterminate sentence of one to ten years.

Kirkland, now 20 years old, would come under the provisions of the statute, known as the juvenile imprisonment act of 1929, according to Oldham.

The Chicago police were requested yesterday to aid in solving the murder of Frank Aiello Jr., 30 years old, who was shot to death through a curtained window while he was playing cards in his home in Milwaukee on Saturday night. Frank was a nephew of Joe Aiello, slain Chicago booze boss.

Wisconsin authorities, unable after eighteen hours of inquiry to trace any motive for the killing, reached into Chicago on the theory that young Aiello's murder might be an echo of gun feuds which culminated in the slaying of Tony Lombardo, Capone lieutenant, and the later murder of Joe Aiello.

The Milwaukee victim, however, was known as a family man; a pressroom apprentice on a Wisconsin paper, and was free, so far as could be learned, from hoodlum alliances.

Frank Aiello's murder had the earmarks of a gang killing. Late Saturday night Aiello and his brothers-in-law, Walter and Steve Konieczny, who live in a neighboring flat, joined in the card game in the kitchen. The table was in a direct line with the curtained sitting room window. Through a side kitchen window, however, the players could be seen by the assassin.

The gunman fired through the curtained window. One shot and then another interrupted the card game and sent Aiello to the floor dead.

The slayer then tossed the gun into the side yard of the Aiello home. It is a 12 gauge shotgun with the barrel sawed off. The gun number, 145,269, was traced to the American Gun company, of New York.

Police records revealed that in 1927 Frank Aiello's father, owner of a Milwaukee store, received a phone call from Angelo Lamantia of Chicago.

Lamantia, Milwaukee police were told at the time, had rented rooms in West Washington boulevard across the street from the home of Lombardo. The rooms were rented, it was alleged, as a machine gun nest to slay Lombardo. The supposed plot was frustrated. Lombardo was later killed, as was Joe Aiello, the latter murder supposedly in retaliation for that of Lombardo.

GORDON MURDER SOLVED AS ONE OF TRIO SQUEALS

Ex-Convict and Pal Are Held by N. Y. Police.

New York, May 24.—[Special.]—A confession naming Harry Stein, racketeer, as the actual slayer of Vivian Gordon, Broadway butterfly, was in the hands of the police tonight, following three new arrests in connection with her murder.

After a conference with Mayor James J. Walker and District Attorney Edward P. McLaughlin of the Bronx, Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney announced that the confession had been made by Harry Schlitten, alias Harvey, driver of the automobile in which Miss Gordon was strangled. The statement was obtained, Mr. Mulrooney said, after a night of questioning Schlitten.

Places Rope Around Her Neck.

Schlitten was quoted as saying that Stein placed a rope around the victim's neck while they were riding in an automobile on Sedgwick avenue near 172d street, the Bronx, on Feb. 25, the night before her body was found in Van Courtlandt park.

Stein then threw the woman to the floor and Samuel Greenhauer, alias Greenberg, who previously had been released after arrest as a material witness, placed his feet on her while Stein drew the noose tight, according to the confession.

"In the words of Schlitten, 'She cackled once,'" said Commissioner Mulrooney.

Mayor Compliments Police.

The mayor sat by during Mr. Mulrooney's recital and later declared that he had come to compliment the police, adding that the confession should absolve them of any suspicion that Vivian Gordon was murdered at the instigation of a policeman. This had been intimated soon after her body was discovered, the mayor recalled, when it was discovered she had offered to appear as a witness at the Magistrate's courts vice inquiry.

Those arrested besides Stein and Schlitten were Greenhauer, who will be charged with the murder jointly with Stein and Izzy Lewis, alias English, who is held as a material witness to corroborate parts of Schlitten's confession.

Stein, whose activities as traced by police include the borrowing of money from Miss Gordon before she was killed, as well as a trip to Norway in connection with some underworld enterprise in which she is believed to have been interested, is now confined in Bronx county jail.

Will Be Granted Immunity.

Schlitten himself, although he admitted being paid for his part in driving the murder car, will be granted immunity, District Attorney McLaughlin indicated by saying that no charge is contemplated against him.

Schlitten was paid $260 for his work of obtaining and driving the murder car, according to his confession.

The principal point now remaining to complete the state's case, that of motive, still is engaging the attention of detectives, Mr. Mulrooney admitted.

FATHER KILLED, NINE HURT AS AUTOS COLLIDE

Inquest Today in Death of Model.

One man was killed, six members of his family were injured and three other men were hurt yesterday in a collision between two automobiles at Cicero avenue and the old Sauk trail, west of Chicago Heights.

The victims were Louis Wiener, 48 years old, a fruit merchant of Kankakee, Ill., who was killed; his wife, Ida; their five children, Rose, 14; Shirley, 13; Mildred, 7; Morris, 2, and Henry, one; Jack Angelcick, 1246 South Troy street, Wiener's partner; Jodee Hilbert, 26 years old, and his brother, William Hilbert, 20 years old, both of Ottawa, Ill.

Speed Out Onto Road.

Chicago Heights police said Wiener, his family and Angelcick were driving north on Cicero avenue in Wiener's car en route to Chicago, when the two brothers, with Jesse driving his car, speeded out of Sauk trail onto Cicero avenue and smashed broadside into Wiener's automobile.

All the injured were taken to St. James' hospital, Chicago Heights.

The elder Hilbert, police said, was intoxicated and will be held for the accident after his recovery.

The death of Wiener and three others raised the 1931 toll in Cook county to 456.

John Bessner, 29 years old, 3140 North Drake avenue. Died in the American hospital, the second victim of a headon street car-auto crash early yesterday at Ashland avenue and Irving Park boulevard. Henry Schmitfel, 24 years old, 3351 North Whipple street, died earlier.

William Gottmer Jr., 23 years old, of 413 Lake street, Waukegan. Killed early this morning when his automobile crashed into a pole at Lee and Perry street in Des Plaines.

Vincent Zapalski, 52 years old, 4033 Berry avenue. Died in Belmont hospital from injuries he received two hours earlier when he was struck by an automobile at Crawford and Milwaukee avenues. Anthony Brania, 5255 School street, driver of the car, was held for the inquest.

Inquest on Model's Death.

An inquest will be held at 10 o'clock this morning at Burke's undertaking rooms at 6749 Sheridan road, into the death of Miss Viola Carlstedt, 6761 Sheridan road, a model, who was killed late Saturday night in an automobile accident in Lincoln park. At the same time it is expected there will be an inquiry into a clash between the city and park police over the release of Miss Carlstedt's escort on bond.

The accident occurred when George D. Daley, 6729 Greenview avenue, sales manager for the Jewel Tea company, and escort of Miss Carlstedt and her roommate, Miss Edith Hayes, also a model, crashed his car into the rear of a motor bus. Miss Hayes was injured. Daley disappeared, and Lincoln park police examining his automobile said they found a bottle of liquor.

Later Lieut. Sylvester Cotter of the Des Plaines street station drove to the Lincoln park station to negotiate for Daley's surrender. He said Daley would not be surrendered if he was to be held without bond for the inquest. Sergt. Conlon of the park police saw Daley in Cotter's car and arrested him.

Soon afterward Judge James J. Kelly of the Superior court telephoned Lieut. Pincus of the Hudson avenue station, and threatened to issue a writ of habeas corpus for Daley unless the police booked him for manslaughter and released him on $5,000 bond. Lieut. Cotter's wife signed the bond and Daley was freed.

Loop Property Owners Shy $10,000,000 Tax Payments

36.92. In normal times, an average of only eight per cent of the loop taxes are not paid on or before the penalty date.

The payment of $19,827,900 on the $31,424,075 loop realty tax bill for 1929 is a settlement of 63.08 per cent of the taxes. This is considerably lower than the payments on the 1928 taxes or the 1927 taxes, neither of which years were normal.

The 63.08 per cent paid on 1929 taxes may be compared, however with 76.49 per cent paid before penalty date on the 1928 taxes and 84.17 per cent on the 1927 taxes.

Recall Revolt on Unequality.

In 1927 the revolt against the inequality of real estate assessments occurred. More than 100,000 complaints were filed. The Supreme court finally decided that the assessment was so unjust as to be illegal. The real estate taxes that year on the so-called central business district were $600,000 more than the bill payable of May 15, last.

The 1928 taxes, payable July last, were nearly 20 per cent lower than in the 1927 taxes, yet only 76.49 per cent were paid before penalty date.

The years of 1924, 1925 and 1926 were normal. Downtown Chicago paid 92.95 per cent of its real estate taxes before the 1924 penalty date, 91.26 per cent in 1925 and 92.04 per cent in 1926. These percentages are comparable with 63.08 for the last penalty date of May 15.

Year.	Taxes levied.	Taxes collected.
1924	$35,750,358	$33,834,290
1925	27,858,981	25,419,482
1926	28,863,685	26,583,947
1927	32,631,796	29,904,112
1928	25,963,921	20,586,777
1929	31,424,075	19,827,900

Some of the delinquents, of course, have paid later in the tax year. In the normal years of 1924, 1925 and 1926 the delinquency at the end of the tax year varied between $643,180 and $941,258. In 1924, 87.5 per cent of the loop real estate taxes were paid within the tax year. In 1925 the percentages was 96.62 and in 1926 it was 96.75; but in 1927 it dropped to 90.16 per cent and in 1928 to 83.61 per cent.

May All Be Paid.

For the tax year of 1929 the county treasurer's office does not now expect more than 75 per cent. If this proves correct there will be $7,858,000 of uncollected taxes on loop real estate at the end of the tax year. Eventually, the treasurer believes that all taxes on loop real estate will be paid because it is so highly valuable.

"But when," he added, "I don't know; but some time in the future the courts or the legislature will see the unfair tax burden placed upon real estate."

CITY PAVEMENTS BLOCK PROGRESS OF SUNDAY AUTOS

Jamming Shows Need of Grade Separations.

BY HAL FOUST.

A quarter of a million Chicagoans rode over pavements of the metropolitan area yesterday, their one day of the week to use the state highways for which they pay gasoline tax seven days a week. The radial roads, widened last year, carried them faster and hence farther into the countryside than a Sunday permitted last spring, but there was still considerable delay at intersections of busy routes where grade separations are needed.

However, the biggest delay as well as the most hazardous portion of these trips into the country was over the bumpy, narrow and congested city streets that connect with the rural highways. The state collects $23,000,000 in registration fees and gasoline taxes from Chicago's automobile owners, but has never spent a penny on Chicago pavements.

May Spend $3,000,000 Here.

Under Gov. Emmerson's legislative program, the state may spend as much as $2,000,000 or $3,500,000 on Chicago's pavements during the next two years in return for $44,000,000 collected here, but the governor defeated a senate measure to appropriate $5,000,000 for the state to start work on an elevated highway here.

The new forty foot roads, by concentrating travel, accentuated the deficiencies of municipal traffic facilities. Four lanes of rural pavement, where formerly there were but two lanes, brought a larger volume of automobiles to stall on city streets, not only in Chicago but in virtually every community of any size.

The grider roads, for the same reason and in the same way, aggravated the need for grade separations at busy highway intersections.

Drivers Keep to Right.

In driving the forty foot pavements, there seemed to be less annoyance from the road hogs than there was a week ago when THE TRIBUNE reported the license numbers, and the licencees of scores of cars found loafing at 30 or 35 miles an hour in the center lane instead of staying to the right so that faster machines might pass conveniently and legally.

The busiest pavements of the metropolitan area yesterday were those leading to the summer resort areas of northern Illinois, southern Wisconsin, northern Indiana and southern and western Michigan.

The vacation season is here, schools will close in a few weeks, and there were thousands of Chicagoans who spent the week-end knocking winter shutters from windows, cutting weeds and planting flower and vegetable gardens around summer cottages a hundred miles or more from Chicago, but only a few hours' drive from the city as modern automobiles travel.

ARMY AVIATORS PLAY WAR NEXT IN NEW ENGLAND

Armada in Boston Today for Maneuvers.

BY TOM PETTEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Mass., May 24.—[Special.]—The first air division moved into New England today to continue its war games. Scouting planes leading the fleet of more than 650 ships into Westfield, Springfield, and Boston found the mythical enemy absent, so the fighting forces dropped down to refuel at a new airport, enjoy a chicken barbecue, and hear orators declare a new war on the communists. The attack on the Reds was launched by J. Trubee Davison, assistant secretary of war in charge of aviation, during his address at the dedication of Rentschler field at Hartford.

The movement of the air fleet into New England from Long Island was accomplished with little confusion and no major accidents. Tomorrow the planes will make dance over the Paul Revere trail and gallop down to Boston for its third big town review.

Get Report on Enemy.

While some of the airmen were picking chicken bones a communique was sent from headquarters stating that information received from all sources indicate that the hostile expedition was about 150 miles southwest of Cuttyhunk island Sunday afternoon and was steaming southwest at a speed of about twelve knots."

With the mythical coalition of foreign powers still at sea, Mr. Davison was anxious to settle for all time the charge that the air maneuvers are costing the government $3,000,000. Mr. Davison attributes the figures to Hanson W. Baldwin, military writer, but under cover men, but his contention is that a group of reporters figured it out for themselves, with possibly a mite of help from the army, and they thought it cheap for such a useful program.

Brains Cost Us Heavy.

"Disarmament organizations are at work spreading insidious and false propaganda," said Mr. Davison as the 9th pursuit squadron began warming its motors for a little sky work-out. "They are working against the interests in an effort to discredit a sensible and conservative public opinion favoring a moderate military establishment for defensive purposes only. By subversive methods they are trying to make the American public believe that the air corps maneuvers are an additional burden on the taxpayer to the tune of some $3,000,000 and that in the midst of business depression.

"The answer is that it is a contemptible lie. These maneuvers, which are part of the regular annual army exercises, are not costing an additional nickel.

Cannot Learn in Chairs.

"In these modern days every one knows that to be a safe and expert pilot you must fly and fly a lot. Our pilots are given a standard number of hours per year for that purpose. Intricate problems of supply and command of a large number of planes cannot be worked out in a swivel chair. It must be done in actual practice. We are learning more from these maneuvers than we have from any that have ever been held."

Texas Guinan and "Gang" Sail; England May Bar Them

Texas Guinan, night club queen, and her "gang" as they sailed from New York last week. Reports from London stated that Scotland Yards detectives would forbid them to land on orders of the home office, but Texas scoffed at this idea and, anyhow, she expects to make quite a hit in France.

Robbery Victims to View Bandit Captured by Girl

Eugene Hefferman, 21 years old, 6111 Woodlawn avenue, a bandit captured on Saturday through the aid of Miss Mossie Walker, clerk in the Charm Hat shop at 4731 Brodway, was held yesterday by the Summerdale police for identification by robbery victims. Hefferman entered the Charm shop and compelled Miss Walker to surrender $90 to him and ordered her and Miss Ruby Neff, a customer, to remain quietly in a rear room. Miss Walker disobeyed, following him when he took a cab. She pointed him out to a passing police squad, which made the capture.

SPRING, GENTLE SPRING, IS TOUGH ON BOAT RIDERS

Chicago tasted real spring weather yesterday with the result that parks, boulevards, and the outdoors generally were crowded.

The lake was no exception. Coast guard stations were busy towing in crippled boats, and heading off others. A strong southwest wind shoved five motor boats, in one instance, northeastward, but the craft managed to return to harbor after ignition and other troubles caused by the heavy wind.

One person was rescued when his 14 foot catboat capsized in the lake off Randolph street. He is Daniel Salter, 20 years old, a member of the Columbia Yacht club. Later coast guards rushed to the yacht station to save a speedboat of the Water Transit Company, Inc., which had sprung a leak at its moorings.

3 IN PLANE DIE IN CRASH AFTER WING FALLS OFF

Pilot and 2 Passengers Are Victims.

Wallingford, Conn., May 24.—(AP)—A pilot and two passengers fell to their death tonight when a wing of their airplane dropped off, crashing the craft soon after it had taken off from the local airport.

The dead: Raymond B. McCorkle, 23, pilot; Jack Cole, 24, and Francis Cobey, 25, all of East Berlin.

The men came to the airport for a cruise in the plane, in which McCorkle had a part ownership.

No reason was assigned for the wing's having become detached.

Air Mail Flyer Killed.

Bellefont, Pa., May 24.—(AP)—A post-winter flurry of snow and rain drove Air Mail Pilot James D. Cleveland to his death on the top of Nittany mountain, just east of here, early today.

Harassed by snow and gusty winds that drove rain about him also, he failed by inches to clear the top of the rugged peak, careened for 500 feet through mountain scrub and boulders, and then died in the cockpit as the branches against which he hurtled tore the wings from his plane, ripped apart the fuselage, and finally shattered the gasoline tank, giving fuel to fire that broke out apparently as the ship quivered to a stop.

The thousand pounds of mail he carried was destroyed.

Killed When Plane Falls.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 24.—(AP)—Capt. James H. Ritter, 38, part owner of the Atlantic City Air Service, was injured fatally today as his monoplane fell 75 feet. A crowd of 5,000 witnessed the accident.

Ritter was demonstrating take-offs and landings in a small pusher type plane when his craft slipped back at a low altitude and crashed. He died in a hospital.

Two Killed; Bodies Burn.

Wayne, Neb., May 24.—(AP)—Guy Strickland, 42, pilot, and Wayne Putman, 20, Naper, Neb., were killed late today when the plane Strickland was piloting struck a down current of air, went into a tail spin, and crashed four miles northeast of here. The wreckage and the bodies burned.

CONVICTS REVOLT AND SET FIRE TO VANDALIA PRISON

Four Shot; Troops Are Rushed to Scene.

calm the storm and succeeded partly when he persuaded a group of more than fifty men to disperse.

Within an hour the farm was so completely guarded that the riot subsided and no one tried to escape. A final report showed none had. Later Col. Frank Whipp, superintendent of prisons, appeared. He said the buildings were fired to cover up a delivery. It was decided to lock the prisoners in the five remaining dormitories and then transfer all today in the new building recently completed a short distance away.

Since early March, prisoners in several Illinois penal institutions have rioted. The disorders at the Joliet and Stateville prisons were the most serious, extending over a period of more than a week. At Stateville alone, a fire caused by convicts did $500,000 damage.

The two most recent disturbances were at the State Hospital for the Criminal Insane at Chester and at Vandalia. On April 30, twelve men tried to escape from the Chester asylum. Five of them were wounded with buckshot. On April 15 the first Vandalia disturbance occurred with the shooting of two men and the flight of four others.

ELGIN HOSPITAL BLAZE

Fire which started at 2 p. m. yesterday destroyed the recreation hall in the administration building of the state hospital at Elgin, causing an estimated loss of $20,000.

Most of the institution's 3,500 inmates were walking about the grounds when the flames were discovered. None of the ward rooms are near the recreation hall, and there was no danger at any time to any of the patients, according to officials.

A few who were in the administration building were marched out by the guards. Elgin police were summoned to keep the crowds back from the blaze and the city fire department aided in bringing the flames under control. The kitchen and the main dining hall, which are near the auditorium, were slightly damaged by water, but were in use again last evening. The fire started, it is believed, from crossed wires on the stage of the hall.

Frank Rodnick, 35 years old, an inmate from Chicago, was reported missing after the fire and was believed to have escaped during the confusion.

WOMAN DROWNS IN FOX RIVER OUTING TRAGEDY

Mrs. E. M. Bondison, 50 years old, of 1325 Wilson avenue, was drowned early yesterday morning when a small rowboat overturned in the Fox river, two miles north of Aurora, and threw her and three companions into the water. All day yesterday police dragged the river bed unsuccessfully for the body.

According to authorities, Mrs. Bondison and her sister, Mrs. Grace Vincent, also of Chicago, had attended a party Saturday night in the cottage of Jack Brady near the river. Others present were Frank Atkinson of 613 East 38th street, Chicago, and Miss Nellie Rich, 35 years old, of Batavia.

Shortly after midnight Brady, Atkinson, Mrs. Bondison, and Miss Rich boarded the rowboat to set some fishing tackle. The craft, it is said, was overloaded, and capsized in the middle of the river. Brady swam to shore for help as the two women and Atkinson clung to the bottom of the upturned boat. While awaiting rescuers Mrs. Bondison disappeared. Miss Rich was saved by Miss Naoma Houck, 28 years old, of Aurora, who heard her cries and swam out to her. Atkinson made shore alone.

Clashes in Polish Corridor Keep Hatreds Alive; Germans Renew Cry for Lost Land

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, May 24.—The "Polish corridor," German and Polish minorities, and the new borders imposed on Europe by the Versailles treaty figured prominently in the discussions of the council of the league of nations, which closed Saturday at Geneva. The bitterness of the closing debate appeared to support the statements of many diplomats that this "bleeding border," as the Germans have named it, contains dangerous germs of new wars.

The Versailles treaty and rulings of the allied councils in the years following the war ordered Germany to relinquish 17,810 square miles and 2,354,961 persons to Poland, to abandon all claim to Danzig and Memel.

Most of the territory awarded Poland was to become the "corridor," giving her a free and broad access to the Baltic sea. The flourishing port of Danzig was turned into a "free city" to provide Polish trade with a modern port.

Germans Protest in Vain.

The Germans protested. They quoted the "right of self-determination of nations, the principle of modern democracy formulated by President Wilson and guaranteed by him to us in his famous 14 points and in the preliminary armistice clauses."

Then, as now, their complaints prove futile. In a few districts in Upper Silesia and in Stuhm, Rosenberg, part of Marienburg and Marienwerder, east of the Vistula, the treaty provided that the inhabitants be called upon to indicate by a vote whether they desire the various communes situated in this territory to belong to Poland or East Prussia.

The Germans stress that in the East Prussian area 92.4 per cent of the votes were cast for Germany and that 97.3 per cent of the votes along the Vistula also went to Germany. Despite this majority, parts of Marienburg were made Polish; the Vistula, connecting the plains of Russia and Poland, the latter's industrial section, with the Baltic, were given to Poland.

Lose Important Mines.

In Upper Silesia 717,122 persons voted for Germany, 483,514 for Poland, yet the districts with fifty-three of Silesia's sixty-seven coal mines, ten out of fifteen zinc and lead mines, twenty-two out of thirty-seven iron smelting works, were given to Poland, according to Germany's figures.

To make matters worse, according to the Germans, an allied commission determined the details of the border line—and its decisions, they add, were always framed to Poland's advantage.

The corridor was carved out of Prussia, separating East Prussia from its mainland, strangling this province, which is a vital part of Germany.

"Ours is a mutilated country," the Germans argue. "The blood vessels to our fertile East Prussia have been cut off. The aim of our former enemies was to atrophy East Prussia, to let it die, so Poland could swallow it, too," and so Germany bemoans the loss of "German soil turned into a Polish corridor, a loss made more bitter by the daily threat to East Prussia."

This corridor and the eastern borders are "the thorn in the side which cannot heal without a major operation," according to German leaders.

Much has been done to heal the wounds along the Polish border. Small towns, which were cut off from their railway stations have built new ones; churches have been erected to replace those allotted to Poland—frantic efforts are being made to save what can be saved, but, as a prominent German official, known as a pacifist, Dr. Caspari, governor of western Prussia, phrased it:

"We feel death stalking us, and the danger of an uprising when a bigger, more striking clash along the border occurs, is always present."

Cities Are Cut in Two.

Dying cities are found on both sides of the frontier—cities like Filehne, Ischofswerder, Tirschtiegel. They are cut in two by the allied rulings. The railroad stations were given to Poland. The Germans built new ones as well as connecting lines, but the countryside—be it Polish or German—is not rich enough to keep two railway centers busy.

The losses would be felt less if a normal exchange, "small border intercourse," were permitted, but, the Germans charge that the Poles will not agree to it, and the border is kept rigidly closed. Rusty barbed wire entanglements stretching across roads and railway lines are keeping towns and villages from communicating with each other.

Germany charges that from Upper Silesia to the Baltic 29 chief highways and 201 branch roads have been condemned by the Poles, together with 61 railway lines. Railway bridges crossing the frontier have been torn down.

Forbidden to Use Vistula.

East Prussia, separated from Germany by the corridor, with its 2,250,000 inhabitants, was to have been given "access to the Vistula to the fullest extent and under equitable conditions," and the use of the Vistula "for themselves, their commerce and their boats," according to the terms of the Versailles treaty. But the Germans point out the "narrow road down to the Vistula, which is East Prussia's one and only access to the Vistula proper," at Kurzebrack.

To make use of the road, the Germans are forced to get a Polish visa, enabling them to travel to Dirschau in Poland, and there they "may or may not get the permission to use the Kurzebrack port," which is Polish territory. Consequently, they term "free access to the Vistula" a farce.

Contrary to all other international agreements about streams, the ruling for the Vistula is that it is not divided equally between both nations bordering it, but it belongs entirely to Poland, and that a narrow strip on the right side of the Vistula is Polish too.

Traffic has died on the Vistula—or is near death. The sandbanks, which formerly were dredged by the Germans, are piling up, with the Poles doing little to prevent their formation.

Ninety-seven and three-tenths per cent of the population along the Marienwerder lowlands voted to remain with Germany in the year of her defeat, 1,895 communities voted for Germany, 9 for Poland, but five big villages on the Vistula were cut out of the Marienwerder district, not because they were Polish, Marienwerder insists, but because they were ideal for a bridgehead for Poland's military forces, a bridgehead opposite the Polish military center, Mewe. The daily petty clashes, annoyances along the frontier keep hatred alive.

Stone Mark Border Line.

Square stones, hidden in the grass, mark the border line. Polish border guards see to it that nobody steps over them. The patches of grass along the Vistula are private property of German farmers. They obtain special passes with Polish visas, allowing them to go down to the river and cut their grass. If a cow or lamb steps over the stones to eat the grass closer to the river, the Polish river police will seize the animals, the Germans complain.

Every man, woman, and child in Germany, regardless of party or creed, is mourning for the "bleeding border" of Europe. Dr. Otto Braun, premier of Prussia, states:

"As long as the corridor remains as a thorn in the flesh of Europe no real peace is possible on this continent."

Austria Closes Frontier to Polish Cattle Transit

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, May 24.—The Austrian frontier has been closed against the transit of Polish cattle. Sanitary regulations have been given as the reason for the decision. It is generally believed here, however, that the ban is connected with the Austro-German customs pact. It is feared it will result n severe losses to Polish business men.

Seize Suspect as Slayer of Father of Gypsy "King"

Paul Nicholas, 22 years old, 6251 South State street, was arrested yesterday as the man who shot and fatally wounded Steve Bimbo, father of Tene Bimbo, "king" of the Gypsies, on May 12 at 729 South Halsted street. Steve Bimbo died in the Mother Cabrini hospital a few hours before Nicholas was arrested. Nicholas was accused of the killing by George Montes, a partisan of the Bimbos in Gypsy government.

FIXED COASTAL DEFENSE HEADED FOR SCRAP HEAP

Easy Prey for Air Attack, Col. Bishop Asserts.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 24.—[Special.]—Fixed coastal fortifications apparently are headed for the military scrap heap.

Surveys conducted by the war department have disclosed that fixed harbor defenses, except in certain localities where the highest powered guns are inserted, has been rendered obsolete by the development of high speed artillery weapons and the remarkable advances registered since the war in the art of military and naval aviation.

As a result of studies instituted by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, army chief of staff, twenty-nine harbor defense forts located along the American continental coastline as protection against attack from the sea, have been marked for complete abandonment or retention only on a caretaking basis. Other surveys now being conducted are expected to result in still further curtailment of the nation's fixed fortifications.

Would Reduce Expenses.

All indications now are that the war department in carrying out its rearmament program, will not replace old fixed guns with guns of that type but will take steps to arrange for protection of the sea coast and sea coast cities by the use of railroad and highly mobile field and army artillery and aircraft. Such a move would not only result in better protection, but would aid in cutting down military expenditures and in that way reducing national expenditures.

Largely due to the fact that most of the existing coastal fortifications were built in the last century before development of military aviation, aircraft carriers and submarines, the guns are mounted in such a way that they are wholly vulnerable to attack from the air and often are outranged by large battleship guns.

Exposed to Air Attacks.

"Our batteries were built in the last years of the last century and the early years of the present," Col. P. P. Bishop of the coast artillery corps, states in a recent discussion of the effect of the development of aviation on fixed harbor defenses. Guns are mounted in concrete emplacements with spacious surrounding platforms. They are well protected from low angle direct fire from the sea by concrete and earth parapets. They are wholly exposed and vulnerable to attacks from the air, and there is no protection from gun fire from the rear.

"Fire control stations are vulnerable and often very much exposed. Aircraft was not thought of when our fortifications were built."

Old Forts Out of Date.

Fortification of the old types served a real purpose in the days of slower and less powerfully armed ships. But today when the development of naval aviation and aircraft carriers has made it possible for a hostile fleet to deliver an aerial attack on a sea coast city with scores of bombing planes, without coming closer than one or two hundred miles of shore, they have virtually no military value. To combat the menace of air attacks from carriers, the army today is working on a re-armament program which includes fixed 5 inch anti-aircraft batteries at a few points and a large number of mobile anti-aircraft batteries of the type maintained at Fort Sheridan, at strategic points where they can be rushed to menaced points in event of attack.

Arrangements have been made to utilize 14 inch and 8 inch railway artillery to protect the commercial centers where railroads are available.

Swift Gun Carriers Developed.

Field artillery guns and the six inch army gun and the 8 inch howitzer will also play a part in the coastal defense program. Trailers have been developed, for carrying 3 inch guns from one point to another at the rate of 50 miles an hour. A new carriage and mount recently has been built for the 6 inch [155 millimeter] gun and 8 inch howitzer which makes it possible to transport batteries of this type at between 40 and 60 miles an hour. Such a mount may be built for 8 inch guns and 12 inch howitzer.

The new carriage which was designed to speed up the artillery for use with mechanized forces is considerably lighter than the one used durwith ball bearings and rubber tires.

Batteries of fixed 16 inch guns are installed to defend the Panama canal, and similar batteries well placed will continue to be used at certain vital points.

LINE UP FOR CHOW WITH OLD MESS KITS AT CANTIGNY FARM

Col. Robert R. McCormick was host yesterday at the ninth annual reunion of veterans of the First division, A. E. F., which was held at Cantigny farm, the McCormick estate west of Wheaton.

Sandwiches, barbecued meats and coffee were served in the open air. Similarity was achieved by having the veterans of Cantigny and other famous battles of the world war get in the chow line with the old time mess kits and cup.

Approximately 250 veterans attended. From 11:30 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. they re-lived in story the days when they were fighting Germans in France. There was a baseball game in the afternoon.

FIND BONANZA IN MOST PRIMITIVE MEXICAN REGION

Oil and Precious Metals Abound.

MEXICO CITY, May 24.—(AP)—An area in Mexico almost flowing in petroleum, rich in gold, lead and silver, and inhabited by wild Tlapanec and Mixtec Indians, was described today by Miss Anita Brenner, author, on her return from a four months' trip into remote areas of Guerrero and Oaxaca states.

Miss Brenner said the natives of the region are so superstitious they believe strangers will kill them with such devices as movie cameras and washing machines and then cut up their bodies to obtain fuel. They do not know what airplanes are and believe bulky matter can be sent by radio.

Sponsored by the Guggenheim foundation with a fellowship to study primitive Mexican Indian life and art, Miss Brenner and her husband, Dr. David Glusker of Brooklyn, N. Y., traveled on horseback and on foot through the region, which is only about 400 miles from Mexico City.

Live in Poverty Among Riches.

"For an area of 300 miles," Miss Brenner related, "this country is tremendously rich in minerals and oil, and yet the Indians there live in abject poverty because of their ignorance and superstitions.

"In that whole great area we did not encounter a single river or spring where the waters were not polluted by oil seepage. Petroleum drips from the hillsides, there are asphalt seepages everywhere, good anthracite coal can be picked up and lead can be cut from the rocks.

"Locations of gold mines are closely guarded secrets, but they take out gold in quantities to supply money for their meager wants.

"Strangers are not welcomed in the area, which begins about 300 miles southwest of Mexico City. Outsiders are tolerated in certain towns, but in others they are killed without warning if they wander too close to hidden gold mines or idol shrines."

Worship Stone Idols.

Miss Brenner described the idols as stones carved to represent animals and peculiarly shaped rocks. Animal and fowl sacrifices, preceded by weird ceremonies, are made regularly on the theory that the idols need food. She found no evidence of human sacrifice.

Traces of Christianity, carried to the region by Spanish missionaries years ago, have disappeared. Ancient Spanish chapels and shrines are now used to house the pagan idols.

Even in this primitive district economic depression has been felt, she said, and in some places difficulty is experienced in supplying animals for sacrifice. Because of this she was able to purchase a few of the smaller idols.

The author and her husband said they found an immense new archeological district of shrines, temples, pyramids, forgotten idols and roadways, which they believe would supply valuable information if excavated. The drawback to this, they said, is the hostile attitude of the Indians to strangers.

HOOVER EXPECTS POSTOFFICE TO SAVE 28 MILLION

Program Is Arranged at Rapidan Parley.

Orange, Va., May 24.—(AP)—A $38,000,000 saving in the postoffice department this fiscal year and a program to continue economies next year were announced today at President Hoover's Rapidan camp.

The announcement said a comprehensive program to increase efficiency in the department and to effect economies was formulated at conferences in which the chief executive, Postmaster General Brown and the assistant postmasters general participated. It was emphasized there would be no decrease in personnel to achieve the savings.

Studies already made indicate a net saving for next year of $15,000,000 under the appropriation of $841,000,000.

Shorter Hours Raise Costs.

An expenditure of an additional $13,000,000 not taken into consideration when the appropriation for the next fiscal year was made was expected, due to the shorter working week for all employés established by congress. This amount, however, was considered in arriving at the net figure. Congress reduced the working week from 48 to 44 hours.

The statement indicated that the department has felt the depression. It was estimated that due to business conditions revenues to the department this year would be $55,000,000 below the original estimates.

"It is noteworthy, however," it was added, "that the receipts for the last month show an increase for the first time since the depression started."

Postal Savings Increase.

Postal savings deposits were reported to Mr. Hoover to be at the highest peak in history—$210,000,000. This was an increase since last July of $175,000,000.

Also the postoffice officials advised the President that "the indefensible practice of payment to political organizations for postoffice appointments in some southern states has been absolutely stamped out" as a result of the citizens' committees appointed by Mr. Hoover to pass upon candidates for such appointments. The President expressed gratification to know that his efforts to end the practice had been rewarded.

While department officials left the camp late today to return to Washington, President Hoover and some of his guests planned to remain overnight. Mr. Hoover expected to leave the mountains early tomorrow morning in order that he might be at his desk at the usual hour.

Remaining at the camp with the President and Mrs. Hoover were Gov. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Dr. and Mrs. William Starr Myers, the former professor of political philosophy at Princeton university; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoover Jr.

Returning today were Postmaster General Brown, Assistant Postmasters General Glover, Philp, Tilton, and Coleman, Edsel Ford, son of Henry Ford, and Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, former commandant of the marine corps, and Mrs. Lejeune and their daughter.

HUNT KIDNAPERS WHO CLIPPED BOY'S EARS, TRIED TO BURN HIM

West Plains, Mo., May 24.—[Special.]—Missouri and Arkansas officials today continued their investigation into the kidnaping of Hal Williams, 13 year old farm boy, who late yesterday was taken into the woods near Corning, Ark., southeast of here, the tips of his ears clipped off, and hanged until he was unconscious. He was then thrown into a pile of burning leaves.

Recovering consciousness as the flames mounted and seared his clothing, young Williams stumbled back to Corning and reported the amazing affair to officers.

Fred Morton, 35, was lodged in the Corning jail a short time later, charged with assault in connection with the mutilation of Williams.

Warrants have been issued for several others.

"JAKE" FACTOR FACES FEDERAL HEARING TODAY

Two deputy United States marshals assigned to guard and detain John [Jake the Barber] Factor pending his appearance today before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker, had him securely hidden yesterday, after having changed hotels twice since they have had Factor in custody. United States Marshal H. C. W. Laubenheimer refused to disclose the temporary residence of the man accused of having accumulated $5,000,000 through stock swindles in England.

Under the terms of Commissioner Walker's order the marshal was authorized to permit Factor to stay at a hotel under the guard of deputy marshals, rather than in jail, while evidence was being sent here for a hearing to determine whether Factor is to be extradited to England. Attorney Franklin R. Overmyer, representing the British government, objected to Factor's being admitted to bail while the federal courts are hearing evidence on the British petition to have Factor given into their custody for trial in London. Commissioner Walker is expected to decide today whether Factor may be released on bail.

A report was circulated last night that $2,000,000 of Factor's alleged swindling profits had been found in Chicago in two trust funds and that steps would be taken today to tie up the money in the hands of two banks for the benefit of his victims. Attorney Overmyer declared he knew nothing about any such discovery.

Fur Storage . . . . .

. . . Yes, madam. We will call for your furs. Our spacious cold storage vaults are absolute protection against moths. Furs are kept cool and dry, in a cold temperature. Of course it is protection against fire and theft as well.

This is the propitious time to have furs repaired and remodeled. Special pricings, careful workmanship—and the time is plenty.

Then, too, you know this very month is the moths' heyday.

RUSSIA PREPARES TO LOOSE FLOOD OF OIL ON WORLD

195,000,000 Barrels Is Quota for This Year.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BAKU, U. S. S. R., April 23.—[By mail.]—Red oil, drenching the globe, driving the Standard and the Dutch Shell out of business, seizing the world markets everywhere, supplying fuel for the fleets of the great naval powers, giving passenger liners and freighters their means of locomotion, affording gas for automobiles everywhere—that is the dream of the naphtha trust, whose headquarters are here.

Two weeks ago the naphtha trust celebrated its "completion of the five year plan in two and one-half years." Lots of scarlet bunting was draped around and lithographs of Lenin and Stalin stare one in the face everywhere, to celebrate the soviet government's first industrial triumph.

About 135 million barrels of oil were produced in 1930 and it is estimated that 195,000,000 barrels will be produced this year. Next year the program calls for about 220,000,000 barrels and in 1933 for 250,000,000 barrels, or 700,000 barrels a day.

Seek to Drown Out Competition.

S. M. Ganshin, head of the oil trust, thinks this will be enough to drown out competition and place soviet Russia on top of the pool, controlling oil all over the world, and forcing the Standard and Dutch Shell to knuckle down and talk turkey with the Reds.

To market the vast additional supplies of oil, the naphtha trust is preparing plans for more pipe lines to cross the Caucasus mountain range, which cuts them off from the Black sea and the outside world. At present there are two pipe lines, one from Baku to Batum, the other from the Grosny oil fields, farther northwest, to Tuapse.

Their pumps are driving oil night and day across the isthmus, and engineers who have examined the layout assert that they must be rested and repaired and new equipment put in, if they are to be expected to stand the strain.

Nothing for Home Consumption.

Thus far the soviet officials have given no serious thought to distributing the precious fuel throughout Russia for domestic consumption. Right in the streets of Baku there are queues lined up before the tanks to get kerosene for the stoves on which the natives do all their cooking. There are only half a dozen gasoline filling stations in the town, and automobiles must line up and wait to get fuel.

It's just as well that the ambitious projects for thousands of tractors have not been lived up to. There would be no means of supplying them with fuel, even if they were ready to start operations. There are only a few thousand tank cars in Russia, and the new shop to manufacture them exists as yet only on paper in blue prints. It will take two years to build before the construction of the tank cars can commence.

The Russians are using wooden tanks mounted on flat cars to transport oil. This additional rolling stock, while diminishing the number of flats available for steel transport, about equalizes the number of metal tank cars lost through accidents and general wear and tear.

Dig for More Wells.

The environs of Baku bristle with derricks, indicating oil wells, and everywhere they are boring for more. There are a number of American drillers in the vicinity and even more in the Grosny fields, but the shipment of the oil is almost entirely in the hands of Russians.

The administration is preparing to start construction on a pipe line from Astrakhan, at the mouth of the Volga at the head of the Caspian sea, to Samara, and another project is down for the construction of a line from Baku, tapping Grosny, up to near Rostov and then striking off into the Ukraine and on to Moscow. Eventually the Astrakhan line will be prolonged from Samara to Kazan.

Huge new reservoirs are under construction to store vast new quantities of oil, and a big modern aviation field is being laid out to accommodate the air force which will be kept here to keep off any raiding planes from attempting to fire the depots with incendiary bombs. Batteries of the latest model anti-aircraft guns will be emplaced as further protection, because the bugaboo of foreign intervention, at the behest of Sir Henri Deterding, the Dutch Shell chieftain, is rampant. Schedules have been figured out estimating the number of flying hours from different points if hostile raiders attempted to bomb the place.

Try to Keep Oil Uniform.

In anticipation of its future place in the oil world the naphtha trust is building more laboratories for chemical analysis of the oil and is beginning to concentrate on keeping the various types uniform. Heretofore considerable complaint has been received as to the varying quality of lubricating oils shipped from here, and efforts will be made to refine it all to a standard.

The crude oil is naturally extremely rich and highly desirable for its inherent qualities, so that both the French and Italian navies rely almost exclusively on "mazout," delivered to them at Batum, for their warships.

CHARITIES BENEFIT FROM SETTLEMENT OF BANKER REITZ ESTATE

Evansville, Ind., May 24.—[Special.]—A settlement reached out of court between Miss Christinne Reitz, heir of the estate of the late Francis Joseph Reitz, banker philanthropist, and her heirs makes possible the disposal of a total of $1,500,000. Besides the cash settlements to the heirs, a number of trust funds were established.

A perpetual trust fund of $200,000 is provided for the Reitz Memorial High school, the income of which will go to the school at Miss Reitz's death. A benevolent trust fund of $190,000 is established, the income of which is also reserved by Miss Reitz while she lives. St. Meinrad abbey will get $25,000 in cash from this fund now. The Little Sisters of the Poor will get $40,000 in cash, and the monastery of St. Clair $40,000 in cash.

Holy Trinity church, Evansville, will get the income on $50,000, Sacred Heart and St. Boniface churches of Evansville will get the incomes from $5,000 bequests. St. Vincent's Orphanage of Vincennes will get the income on $15,000, and Albert Parker, a house servant, will get the income on $10,000. At his death it will go to St. Meinrad abbey.

Kissed Girl; Convicted of Manslaughter; Auto Skids

Portland, Me., May 24.—[Special.]—William C. Gray has been found guilty of manslaughter under unprecedented circumstances. While driving an automobile at a speed said to have been 55 miles an hour Gray tried to kiss a young woman companion. The machine skidded into a tree and the woman was killed.

UNITE MEDICAL GUILDS TO FIGHT BIRTH CONTROL

Catholic Organizations Form Central Unit.

New York, May 23.—[Special.]—The Catholic physicians' guilds in various cities on the North American continent, regarded as among the foremost allies of the Roman Catholic church in its fight to defeat the birth control movement, are to be united under an international secretariat, it was announced today at a meeting of the Bronx guild, held at Fordham university.

In making the plan public, the Rev. Ignatius W. Cox, professor of ethics at Fordham and moderator of the Bronx guild, said a meeting is to be called here next month with the design of concentrating the activities of guilds in the United States by means of a national organization. He had previously indicated immediately after the recent pronouncement in favor of birth control by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, that a unification plan was under consideration.

Former Leader Talks.

The plan for an international secretariat was described as "pending," with indications that steps to realize it will be taken after the national grouping is accomplished. Another feature of yesterday's meeting was an address in opposition to birth control delivered by Dr. William P. Healy, former president of the New York County Medical society and former dean of Fordham medical school.

No single body of recognized specialists on the subject has issued an indorsement of birth control, and whatever strength the birth control movement had gained is to be attributed to the vigorous efforts of a small group of proponents, Dr. Healy declared.

Keep Up Attack.

"There had been a constant pounding by this limited group," he said, "but they have had sufficient funds and sufficient persistence to continue this battering at government and states and such scientific groups as the New York Academy of Medicine. They have continued their propagandizing year after year and have gradually forced their wedge deeper.

"Such bodies as the New York County Medical society, the American Medical association, the New York obstetrical society, and the American Gynecological society have not approved of birth control. But its advocates have continued at their publicity activities until they have given the impression that there is wide support for the movement."

ILLINOIS U. WILL CONFER DEGREES ON 2,000 JUNE 16

Advance Date Because of Hoover's Visit.

Urbana, Ill., May 24.—[Special.]—The sixtieth annual commencement exercises will be held at the University of Illinois Tuesday afternoon, June 16, with approximately 2,000 degrees being conferred. Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, who assumed the presidency of the state co-educational institution last July, will make his first appearance before an Illinois graduating class when he delivers the commencement address and confers degrees. The commencement exercises were originally planned for Wednesday morning, June 17, but were advanced one day due to President Hoover's visit to Springfield on that date.

Stone to Give Baccalaureate.

The Rev. John Timothy Stone, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church of Chicago, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class on Sunday afternoon, June 14, at 4 o'clock. Class day exercises will be held at 9:30 o'clock Monday morning, June 15. A band concert and lawn festival, featured by class reunions, will be held during the afternoon, with class dinners in the evening. A second band concert will be held Monday night, to be followed by the president's reception for graduates and visitors.

Alumni reunions will be held early Tuesday morning, June 16, and will be followed by the annual meeting of the alumni association. The commencement exercises, starting at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, will close the academic festivities of the year.

Chicago Commencement June 13.

Commencement exercises for the Chicago departments of the state institution, which include the colleges of medicine and dentistry and the school of pharmacy, will be held at 9:30 o'clock Saturday morning, June 13, at the Ashland Boulevard auditorium, Chicago. Dr. Edwin H. Kraus, dean of the college of pharmacy of the University of Michigan, will deliver the commencement address and degrees will be conferred by Dr. Chase.

PROTECT FOREIGN SETTLEMENT AS CHINESE BATTLE

HONGKONG, May 24.—(AP)—The British destroyer Somme dashed at full speed to Hoihow on the Island of Hainan today to protect the foreign community, which was endangered by fighting between rival military factions during the week-end.

An arriving at Hoihow the destroyer found the British steamer Kingyuan had evacuated the women and children at the first sign of trouble. Subsequently they were disembarked after the situation became quiet.

GIRL HURT AT TRACK.

End 5 DayTour of Proposed Site for National Park

Dubuque, Ia., May 24.—(AP)—Roger W. Toll of the national park service and his party today closed their five day tour of the proposed upper Mississippi river national park area. The proposed park includes parts of Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois, and Minnesota. The party spent last night at Villa Louis, the historic mansion of Hercules L. Dausman, at Prairie du Chien. Toll left tonight for St. Louis to attend the national conference on state parks.

Acid Stomach Made Like New—Sleeps Well

"What a difference in my health! ACIDINE has made my stomach like new. I have no pains in my limbs. My bowels are regular. Now I sleep all night," says Asa B. Hoy, of Indianapolis, Ind.

ACIDINE is the only known remedy which contains Japtase, that in laboratory tests digests 800 times its weight of certain heavy, starchy foods which cause trouble. It neutralizes burning acids, soothes irritated stomach linings, stops grassy headaches, sleeplessness and nervousness in acid conditions. ACIDINE also fortifies you against colds by reducing acidity.

ILLINOIS NAMES OAK PARK YOUTH CADET COLONEL

Military Day Exercises on Thursday.

Urbana, Ill., May 24.—[Special.]—A. E. Lattan, 806 North Kenilworth avenue, Oak Park, has been named student colonel of the University of Illinois Reserve Officers Training Corps for next year. He will be installed during the annual military day festivities to be held on the campus Thursday. More than 3,000 cadets in the reinforced brigade will pass in review before Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, commandant of the Sixth corps area. Numerous other awards for military excellence during the year will be presented to cadets.

Seven Inspecting Officers.

Seven inspecting officers from the Sixth corps area will arrive here Wednesday noon, and after calling on President Harry W. Chase with Col. Charles W. Weeks, commandant of the university brigade, they will inspect the military theory class meeting that afternoon. Formal inspection of the seven units, including the field artillery, cavalry, signal corps, infantry, engineers, coast artillery and air corps, will begin at 3 o'clock Thursday morning.

Maj. Gen. Parker will review the brigade on the drill field north of the Illinois Memorial stadium Thursday afternoon. Immediately after troops have moved into position, 59 advanced corps cadets will receive reserve officers' commissions from Maj. Gen. Parker. Mrs. Della Coleman, Chicago department of the Woman's Relief corps of Illinois will then present the organization's panel inscribed with the names of eighteen cadets who were outstanding in military work during the last year.

List of Honor Students.

Students to be honored by having their names inscribed on the panel are C. O. A. Bernard, 5054 North Leavitt avenue, and E. J. Pouser, 4306 West 21st place, both of Chicago; R. S. Jorgensen, Winnetka; J. W. McElroy, River Forest; W. N. Neff, Fort Sheridan; F. S. Cooper, Palestine; J. A. Andersen, Pleasant Plains; J. S. Drake, Piper; P. R. Evans, Urbana; H. L. Haworth, St. Joseph; R. W. Henderson, Downers Grove; S. P. Langhoff, Peoria; R. A. Schultz, Champaign; J. H. Allen, Oklahoma City, Okla.; J. A. Hervey, Raton, N. M.; A. L. Logan, Millsboro, Mass.; W. A. Southard, Omaha, Neb., and E. S. Winsper, Cleveland, O.

Several awards will be made to cadets for military excellence, including the University medal to the outstanding sophomore, won by Elliott Durand, 3336 E. 68th street, Chicago; the Hazelton medal to the outstanding freshman, to David A. McNeill Jr., 6539 Monroe avenue, Chicago; R. C. Retherford, Danville, Ill., will get the silver medal to the outstanding freshman in the signal corps, and the Phalanx medal to the best all around cadet in the signal corps. The Cavalry medal has also been won by Elliott Durand of Chicago.

Lattan to Take Command.

Lattan, the new student-colonel, will be installed, take command, and discuss the brigade. Lattan, who succeeds S. P. Langhoff, Peoria, as student colonel, is a major in the signal corps and the first representative of that unit to be selected as student colonel.

Among the advanced corps seniors who will receive their commissions from Maj. Gen. Parker during the exercises are the following from Chicago and suburbs: R. H. Anderson, 5641 Kenmore avenue; A. T. Bennett Jr., 818 South Winchester avenue; C. E. Bodmer, 7350 Ridge boulevard; J. W. Bradbury, 7121 North Paulina avenue; D. S. Charlton, 7645 South Union avenue; C. A. Frazer, 7529 Yale avenue; J. L. Haefele, 5824 Stony Island avenue; I. R. Mandelson, 5218 Drexel avenue; S. J. Roti, 2603 Devon avenue; L. E. Rubel Jr., 5480 Ridgewood court; W. C. Russell, 1730 North Linder avenue; R. D. Smiley, 4515 Woodlawn avenue; C. J. Svilow, 3351 Irving Park; T. J. Wang, 4548 North Albany avenue; N. S. Weber, 2506 Cortland avenue, all of Chicago; D. A. Parkhurst, Wheaton; E. R. Stege, Oak Park; H. C. Stitch, Glen Ellyn; R. J. Turney, Harvard, and J. R. Webb, Geneva.

LIST WINNERS IN FIRST SERIES OF TUNE TANGLES

Many Entries Received in Puzzle Contest.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE herewith announces the winners of $5,000 offered in the first of the Tune Tangle contests, which closed May 9.

Each week day for 42 days a crossword puzzle appeared in THE TRIBUNE incorporating the name of some popular song, also depicting its title in the center puzzle picture. Each evening WGN played the tune of the puzzle to be solved in the next morning's paper as an aid to contestants and all crossword puzzle fans.

Many Replies Received.

The huge volume of replies to these fascinating tangles brought the returns to mammoth proportions and a large group of judges worked for weeks grading the entries. Thousands were beautiful but only a small percentage correct.

Accuracy and neatness were the tests that brought the first prize of $1,000 to Agatha Spahn, 2048 Irving Park boulevard.

Mildred R. Seidel of 504 Lake drive, South Milwaukee, received the second award of $500.

RABBIS CHARGE FAKE 'KOSHER' MEATS SOLD BY NEW YORK DEALERS

New York, May 24.—[Special.]—Charges that a great percentage of the "kosher" meat and poultry sold in New York City is not "kosher" will be discussed tomorrow by Mayor Walker with a large delegation of rabbis and representatives of Jewish organizations at a conference in the board of estimate chamber.

The mayor has invited Commissioner of Accounts James A. Higgins, Markets Commissioner Thomas Dwyer, and Health Commissioner Shirley W. Wynne to be present to hear the complaints of the rabbis. It was learned that the mayor has given assurance to the representatives of the Jewish organizations that steps will be taken to remedy the situation, if those steps can possibly be worked out.

N. Y. DENTIST WANTS TO LEAD EXPEDITION AGAINST RATS' LAIR

New York, May 24.—[Special.]—A dentist who wants to "beard rats in their lairs" is trying to organize a rat hunting safari among the garbage hills of Riker's island. Hopeful that the safari will find sport as well as an opportunity for community service the dentist, Dr. Harry Unger, has already received partial permission for the hunt from Commissioner Charles S. Hand of the department of sanitation and intends to write today to Commissioner Richard C. Patterson Jr., head of the correction department.

Should Commissioner Patterson fall in with the plan Dr. Unger intends to lead from twelve to twenty sportsmen armed with rifles to the island and engage in a night hunt. Commissioner Hand wrote that he had no objection to the safari if the "gentlemen who comprise it will concentrate on the rats and not, by any chance, do injury to our employés."

Follow These Simple Rules:

1. Each evening for 42 consecutive evenings (not including Saturdays) WGN will broadcast 3 songs of yesterday—"Tune Tangles." On each day following the broadcast the Chicago Tribune will print "Tune Tangle" Crossword Puzzle. Each puzzle will contain the title of one of the songs broadcast the preceding evening. You are invited to listen to the broadcast, solve the Tune Tangle Crossword in the next day's Tribune and name the song.

2. The Chicago Tribune will pay $5,000.00 in Cash Prizes to the persons who send in the nearest correctly solved and neatest complete sets of answers in accordance with these rules. NOTE: This means that you do not necessarily have to solve each of the 42 Tune Tangles completely to win. The prizes will be paid to the persons whose entries rank highest.

3. The prizes are as follows:

1st Prize		$1,000.00
2nd Prize		500.00
3rd Prize		250.00
Next 2 Prizes,	$100.00 each	200.00
Next 5 Prizes,	50.00 each	250.00
Next 10 Prizes,	25.00 each	250.00
Next 100 Prizes,	10.00 each	1,000.00
Next 310 Prizes,	5.00 each	1,550.00
430 Prizes, Totaling		$5,000.00

4. This offer is open to everyone—men, women, boys and girls—except employees of the Chicago Tribune and their families. You pay nothing. Just prove your skill.

5. Tune Tangle Crosswords are to be submitted only in complete sets. Do NOT send in each puzzle separately. Hold all puzzles until you have the complete set of 42. Then send them to "Tune Tangles," Chicago Tribune, Park office Box 1718, Chicago, Illinois. All entries must be in by midnight, 15 days after Puzzle No. 42 has been printed.

6. Each entry must be sent by First Class Mail, postage prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned by the Postoffice Department. Contestants may submit as many sets of puzzles as they wish, but no contestant will be entitled to more than one prize.

7. You need not buy the Chicago Tribune. You may copy or trace the puzzles and send them in. The Chicago Tribune may be examined at any of its offices or at Public Libraries free of charge.

8. The judges will be appointed by the Chicago Tribune. Their decision will be final. In case of ties, a duplicate award will be paid to each tying contestant.

JAPAN TO REDUCE ARMY PERSONNEL BY 25,000 MEN

Will Buy More Guns with $4,000,000 Saving.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, May 24.—The most important army reform in the last two decades, involving reduction of Japan's army personnel by 25,000, has been approved by the "big three," who decided to sacrifice man power for more effective martial equipment. "The big three"—War Minister General Jiro Minami, the chief of the general staff, Gen. Hanji Kanaya, and the inspector general of military education, Gen. Nobuyoshi Muto, announced that the aim of the war office hereafter will be to build the Japanese army into the best equipped force in the world. All savings effected through reduction of the personnel will be devoted to improving material implements, they said.

This announcement came as somewhat of a disappointment to the public, which had hoped the savings would go to lightening the burdens of the people. This was indicated when the army readjustment plan was first proposed by the Hamaguchi cabinet. In the meantime, however, the cabinet changed and a new war minister was installed.

$4,000,000 a Year Saving.

According to this official, only $4,000,000 a year will be saved through the readjustments planned, and this amount, while hardly noticeable in the tax reduction program, will greatly aid the nation in placing the army on a level with that of soviet Russia and other countries which maintain efficiently equipped forces.

The press, however, does not agree with the military leaders. The Kokumin, for instance, declares editorially that the ultimate end of the administration readjustments now under way must be in the direction of reducing the burdens of the people and of awakening a fairer taxation system.

"It is very disappointing to see the government making an inordinate fuss over administrative reforms and yet failing to emphasize the fact that it is the alleviation of public burdens on which such readjustments are insisted," the paper declares.

Minister Defends Policy.

Minister of War Minami in defending his policy said:

"We considered this reform independently of the administration, finance and taxation readjustments which the government is at present carrying on. Apart from this reform we are contemplating readjusting the organization of bureaus and sections of the war ministry and of cutting our pay roll in line with the readjustment program of the government."

As the first step in modernizing the equipment of the army, the military chieftans decided to increase the machine gun force and to organize howitzer corps in the artillery force and armored car corps in the cavalry force. Motor equipment in the transport corps will also be considerably improved.

Defeated Mayor Candidate Sells Own Paper; Arrested

Minneapolis, Minn., May 24.—[Special.]—Arthur Kasherman, defeated candidate for mayor in the city primaries, was arrested last night on a loop street corner for selling copies of his newspaper, the Public Press, which has been suppressed by police. He was released on his own recognizance under order to appear in Municipal court Monday. Kasherman now has an appeal pending in District court for an injunction to prevent police from barring sale of his papers.

JAMES MURRAY, MAIL ROBBER, FREE TOMORROW

JAMES MURRAY.

James Murray, who has served more than five years in the federal penitentiary in Atlanta for participation in the $2,000,000 Rondout mail robbery of 1924, is to be released on parole tomorrow. He was first sentenced to twenty-five years, but this was reduced to twelve years, and the good time allowance makes possible his freeing at this time.

Plans for Murray to operate a $30,000 hot dog stand at Harlem and North avenues have been announced. But William A. McGrath, chief federal probation officer of the Chicago area, has asserted that he will keep Murray under close scrutiny.

NO SPECIAL SESSION.

President Hoover will not call a special session of congress. He says he does not know of anything which would more disturb the healing processes of the economic situation. "We cannot legislate ourselves out of a world economic depression; we can and will work ourselves out of it." This brief, sound statement disposes of the government medicine man and charm worker for the rest of the year. That worker cannot appear with his magic until December.

The United States politically is not committed to an unqualified doctrine of laissez faire, but, regardless of considerable government organization of business, the main reliance of the country is upon the operation of individual human intelligence which respects elemental economic rules. The American system has incorporated in it some mechanical safeguards which have worked and has attempted some which have not. Among the former most people would put the tariff, immigration restriction, the federal reserve act, etc.; among the latter, notably, the farm board act, the federal trade commission, the U. S. shipping board, etc. In general, American experience sustains American policy, which is not to break down a society of competent individuals by setting over them a many chambered structure of bureaucracy.

This free system is now exposed to attack by theorists because of a long period of depression for which the cures are sought in extensions of government machinery. If President Hoover had agreed to the calling of a special session of congress the object would have been legislation to force a recovery by government magic. Some of the proposals would have set out for Moscow, others would have called to Mussolini. All would have aimed to throw the United States far to the left of the road it has tried to travel between the extremes of doctrine. The disorder would have been notable and the damage unpredictable.

The President's decision not to tolerate the idea of a special session leaves the country the open road out.

A DRY ABROAD.

When the mayor of Los Angeles, John C. Porter, was invited with Mrs. Porter to join the mayors of other American cities in a good will trip to France, he could have considered that France is a country in which the use of wine has been regarded as one of the amenities of life since the year one and as a dry he could have declined the invitation. If in spite of the French use of wine as a beverage as common as water he had accepted, he could have reserved his right to pass the cup which was certain to be offered him, assured that his feelings would be respected.

Mr. Porter accepted none of the alternatives offered him. He joined the party. When the mayor of Havre gave the visiting Americans a breakfast party at which a toast in champagne was proposed to the president of France, Mr. and Mrs. Porter bolted from the room to register their morality before the world. Before this incident the Los Angeles mayor had made himself an obnoxious prohibition lecturer on every possible occasion when he encountered habits differing from his own.

The United States must apologize to the mayor of Havre and the French people and offer any condolences to Los Angeles which that city may be in a mood to receive. Mr. Porter, however, must be recognized as a fair type of American prohibitionist, distinguishing himself by bad manners to satisfy his peculiar virtues.

NEW YORK'S POWER AUTHORITY.

Scrutator has written in some detail about the new power authority which has been created by act of the legislature in New York. The new agency is to join with Canadian authorities in the construction of dams and power plants along the international frontier. In all, it is estimated, more than 2,000,000 horsepower are to be harnessed. New York's share is to be sold to existing power companies for distribution to consumers.

The arrangement seems to have met with no considerable opposition in New York, though its weaknesses seem obvious. As was pointed out in the minority report of the engineering board, if the power authority is not authorized to distribute as well as manufacture electricity it will find itself in an unfortunate position for bargaining when it comes to contracting with the existing private companies for distributing its output.

On the other hand, as the majority was at pains to explain, the state is not the proper agency to undertake the distribution of electricity and the making of rates. Moreover, a single water power development cannot be an efficient producer of electricity unless it is linked with auxiliary steam plants. Further, if the state went into the business of power distribution, it would have to build its own transmission lines, many of which must wastefully duplicate existing lines.

Both the majority and minority were correct as far as they went. Neither went far enough, and the reason is easily understood. The possibility of constructing the power plants is a fascinating one, appealing powerfully to the engineering imagination. It is even possible, though not likely, that the state might build the works economically. [Muscle Shoals is not a hopeful portent, but perhaps New York would do better.] At any rate, the project appealed to the engineers as something worth doing and they so reported.

The power authority which has been set up will not, as we understand it, borrow upon the credit of the state. Its credit will be its own. Perhaps even so it will be able to obtain money somewhat more cheaply than the Niagara-Hudson company can borrow from its sponsor, the Morgan bank. If the saving amounts to as much as 1 per cent, the difference will be only $2,000,000 a year on the total cost of the project, and when that is distributed among hundreds of thousands of power users its importance almost vanishes.

Meanwhile, the state will have been put in the business of manufacturing a commodity which it cannot sell except to private corporations. They will have no responsibility to the holders of the dam construction bonds and they will not be under any pressure to utilize the power produced at the dam to the best advantage. Both of these objectives would be attained if the private company which is to distribute the power would also construct the dam and own the power plant. With its right to regulate rates, the state could see that any benefits to be derived from cheaper generation would be passed on to the consumers.

It is altogether probable that if there were overwhelming economies to be expected, the private companies would have taken advantage of them long ago, as they did at Niagara. As it is, the private companies are content to let the public take the risk. The fact is probably significant.

In New York they have tried to compromise with socialism. We venture the forecast that the experiment will be regretted.

"WE ARE, WITH BEST WISHES—"

A letter to the editor of THE TRIBUNE from Mr. George S. Hamilton of the advertising department of the Consolidated Cigar corporation is published in the Voice of the People this morning. Mr. Hamilton is exercised over the tobacco tax which the legislature of Illinois has had under consideration of late. He is sure that a vigorous editorial protest will help kill the bill.

He is probably right. On May 12, eight days before Mr. Hamilton wrote the letter and eleven days before his letter was received, THE TRIBUNE did publish an editorial opposing the tax and meanwhile the bill has gone into a decline from which it is not likely to recover. THE TRIBUNE published its opinion without any coaching from Mr. Hamilton or any one else in or out of the tobacco business as to our duty to our readers. We venture to suggest that the vast majority of advertisers would regard the effort to instruct the editor of THE TRIBUNE in his duty to the public as an impropriety. The editor of THE TRIBUNE regards it as an impertinence. The other newspapers he addressed will indicate their position.

If the writer of the letter was not sensitive to the impropriety he might have been expected at least to have regard for the interests of the cigar business. It should have been obvious to him that letters such as he addressed to the editor of THE TRIBUNE could only serve to negative any editorial utterances against the tax. The friends of such measures always say that any editorials in opposition have been inspired by the counting house and Mr. Hamilton has done what he can to support the argument. If the tobacco tax is enacted in Illinois he can take much of the credit for the achievement to himself.

"May we hear from you as to just what action you take in this matter?" he inquires. Gladly. A copy of this editorial will be mailed to him. We suggest that future communications of the advertising department of the Consolidated Cigar corporation be addressed to the advertising department of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and confined in scope to matters which properly concern advertising departments.

Editorial of the Day

RUSSIAN COMPARISONS.

[New York Times.]

If Great Britain or the United States were today unsuccessfully engaged in trying to expand industrial plants while Russia kept turning out new factories and power stations there would be some reason for drawing the contrast between Russia and the western nations. If they were today the scene of mass privation and misery while Russia flowed with milk and honey there would be reason in the west for taking notice of a competitive régime being developed in soviet Russia. But actually there is no basis for contrast. Soviet Russia today is laboring with might and main to solve the problem of production. The difficulties of the western nations are due to the fact that they have solved that problem only too well.

One superficial comparison may be drawn, and is as a matter of fact frequently drawn. The capitalistic nations suffer from unemployment, whereas soviet Russia has no idle workers. But this is using words in an obsolete sense. To say "unemployment" used to mean, and still suggests, privation, misery, utter destitution, crime, sickness, social degeneration in various forms. To say "employment" evokes a picture of full dinner pails, comfortable shelter, clothes, recreation—a smiling and happy land. But if one looks at the western nations with a total of perhaps a score of million unemployed, and then at soviet Russia with a reported shortage of labor, the conditions appear pretty nearly reversed. In the capitalistic countries there is, of course, hardship due to unemployment, but there is no starvation, no misery, certainly no destitution; there is even a fair measure of comfort arising, as some complain, from too generous methods of public insurance and relief. England has been suffering from large scale unemployment for a dozen years, but the health of the English people has continued to improve, and the figures of school attendance have gone up and the figures for lawbreaking have continued to decline.

In soviet Russia, where full employment reigns, it is a fact openly avowed by the government that the present great economic effort is being made at the cost of heavy "sacrifices" by the Russian people. Food is rationed, a pitiful housing shortage prevails, the clothing famine is chronic, authorities are always summoning the Russian masses to draw the belt tighter. There is no question of comfort when there is such a bitter dearth of necessities. If this is what "employment" means, then the western nations can at any time attain 100 per cent employment—on Russia's terms. Every American and English worker can be given a job, on half rations, producing an inventory of 20,000,000 automobiles against the demand in 1945, or producing billions of yards of cotton cloth against the demand in 1950. The soviet government is engaged in a series of plans for the future which involve general privation for another fifteen or twenty years. After that it may be able to distribute its produced wealth more equally and evenly than we have succeeded in doing. But that is by no means a certainty.

ANYHOW, JUNE'S COMING.

Another week and all you Pollyannas are supposed to smile. But the cold weather sort of freezes the smiles before they get well started. And Old Man Prosperity is still sneaking around behind that corner, and there doesn't seem any good way suggested yet to drag him out in a hurry. Even that grand old village cutup, Tom Edison, has stopped a lot of good cheer by giving up the search this year for the smartest boy. Nobody cared much about catching the smartest boy; there's too many of him around, anyhow; but it added to the joy of living to read Tom's hypothetical questions as to whether you would shoot your mother-in-law or your wife if the three of you escaped from a sinking ship in a boat in which there was only room for two. We shall miss Tom's questionnaire very much; it contained many a good hearty laugh. And these days we need laughs. There ought to be a special session of congress, or the Wickersham committee should make another report, or the Republicans ought to publish their platform for 1932—anything to take our minds away from things in general and start us off in mad peals of mirth.

SONNET.

They that have many loves have much delight,
And faithfulness is still a friend to pain;
Death at the constant aims his arrow's flight,
Having thereby the greater spoil to gain.
I am not made to love you for an hour;
Would it were so! then might my wayward heart
Love you with love as transient as a flower,
And having loved, to love again depart,
And having kissed, those kisses all forsworn,
Offer again the lips I vowed to you,
Strangling my love to see a new love born
Sweeter than dreaming and as little true.
I am not so, yet so I too have done,
Who loving you have many loves in one.

YES, WHY NOT HAVE A LITTLE SPORT NEWS IN THE PAPERS?

R. H. L.: Interviewed a farmer today who is making great sacrifices to send his boys to college so that they can earn a living, and, in time, maybe pay off the mortgage. One, who was backward in pitching hay, is showing up rather well as a baseball pitcher; another is majoring in football; while the third is making fine progress with the tennis racket. (Any kind of a racket goes well these days, the farmer remarked.) "But I don't think these here college curriculums are as strong yet on sport as they should be," he said. "Too much prominence is given to old-fashioned professors of language and mathematics and things like that, and not enough to football coaches. I think the newspapers are partly to blame. When an astronomer discovers a new milky way, or a biologist digs deeper into the secret of life, the papers devote page after page to his work. Every big daily, you know, carries two or three pages of scientific stuff, but only a paragraph or two about sports. The same way with our home paper. Hardly a word about the Cubs and Sox, but whole columns about science and literature and art. I bet if the president of Harvard would fall and hurt himself a little it would be wired and radioed all over the world. But if something serious would happen to Babe Ruth I doubt if we'd hardly hear of it."

All the time he talked the farmer was fussing with a balky tractor. "If it was a horse I'd cuss it and kick it in the slats," he observed savagely, "but all you can do with these things is to adjust their fool carburetors and clean their spark plugs, and then send to town for the garage man."

Just then his fourteen year old daughter appeared on the scene. I was surprised to note that the girl was not at all freckle-faced nor buxom. On the contrary, she was decidedly petite and chic, much lip-sticked and rouged, and her hair was plastered down in water-waved ringlets.

The farmer smiled at her approvingly. "We're figuring on making a movie star or a beautifier out of Sis," he explained, "according to whether she photographs or manicures best. No gathering twelve cent eggs or churning twenty cent butter for her. No sir."

His wife, who was decidedly buxom, called from the house that dinner was ready. Needless to say, I accepted the invitation.

PARTING WORDS TO A MODERN ANANIAS.

Fie on those who'd mourn you!
I could not even say
What was in your soul, lad,
Or if your feet were clay.

And I can do without you—
Think not 'tis you I miss—
But where's another lad so
Enamored of my kiss?

And where is he who truly knows
How charming are my smiles,
My manner how distracting,
How ravishing my wiles?

I'm searching for a new love
To dry these witching eyes:
'Tis easy to forget you—
But not your pretty lies!

KEEPING MENTALLY WELL.

THE next great public health movement will be for the prevention of mental maladies. The care of the mentally disturbed has become too much of a burden. The resources of society are about to break under it. To this must be added the cost of inefficiency and the burden of unhappiness which falls on the individual because of minor mental disorders, such as those which result from fear, worry, anxiety; from nervousness, mental depression, and melancholia; from jealousy, envy, anger, and hatred. The harm done by these far outweighs the burden due to the cost of asylums and homes.

Some of the major mental disturbances are due to infections; some to drugs; some to bad inheritance; and many evolve out of minor mental maladies such as anxiety and hysteria.

The prevention of those that are due to infections consists in preventing the infection, in the first place, and complete cure of those who have become infected in spite of all that has been done to prevent it. The prevention of the insanities due to drugs consists in having people recognize the dangers of such drugs as alcohol, morphine, cocaine, and others that produce insanity. When the insanity is the result of inheritance the methods of prevention are equally plain. The insane, including the feeble-minded, have no right to beget children to lead unhappy lives and that, too, at the expense of society.

The more important element of prevention consists in recognizing mental and emotional instability in childhood and in basing training on the conditions found. Children who are overly quiet and lonely must be trained away from dementia precox. Those with exaggerated ups and downs may be found to be cycloids. If so, they must be trained away from the manic depressive state.

Those who are overly suspicious may be found to be paranoids. They must be trained away from that form of mental disturbance. There are children whose excessive fears are heading them toward mental trouble. They, too, must be trained. All training must be carefully conceived and carefully applied, else it may do harm. Is it Frankau who has created a character whose malady consisted in being afraid of being afraid?

SENILE WARTS.

F. M. writes: What is the remedy for the small, very dark, and wartlike bodies which appear on hands of old persons? They are not usually sore unless they grow so large as to be in the way, when they become irritated.

REPLY:

These are senile warts. As a rule the question is dismissed with the statement that they are due to age. They are not usually important, though occasionally one becomes cancerous.

TREATING DIABETES.

C. M. writes:

1. Is there any cure for diabetes?
2. If a person who has diabetes loses weight and strength is it possible to gain normal weight again?

REPLY.

1. Very few people are cured of diabetes. Some are. Many learn how to live so that they are able to do the day's work, to be comfortable, and to live to a reasonable age.
2. As a rule, it is. First, he must learn how. Next, he must live the law.

KEEP THE SCALP CLEAN.

L. I. M. writes: What is the remedy for dandruff and itching scalp?

REPLY.

Cleansing and brushing the hair frequently and well would cure most cases. Some require the services of a skin specialist.

DISLIKES MORNING RISING.

B. S. writes: I am considered a nervous type, and am always sick and upset if I get up before noon. I have never been able to hold a job over a week in my life. I have tried different doctors and methods, but to no avail. Is there any difference in the air in the morning and during the day?

REPLY.

Why blame the air?

I judge you are unemployable because you are of an inferior constitution and without training. A psychiatrist could tell you whether you are capable of being trained.

PROBATE A NECESSITY.

Chicago, May 15.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My mother died six months ago, leaving a will. I was appointed executrix, but did not have access to the vault. Therefore I put it in the hands of the attorney where the will was drawn and said will was probated. It was exempt of inheritance tax. 1. Can the will now be withdrawn from the Probate court? There are three minor children, my brother, and myself involved. I was notified that a guardian ad litem was appointed. 2. My mother informed me in the presence of my sister that I was to take care of the minors' estate, being the executrix, but that is not mentioned in the will. 3. We would like to hold down the expense and my brothers and sister are satisfied for me to take full possession. R. M.

1. No.
2. The wording of the will would control.
3. Since there are minors, probate proceedings would be necessary.

ANNUL FIRST MARRIAGE.

Chicago, May 15.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. A man meets a woman, both citizens of Iowa, the woman not having been divorced a year from her first husband. They leave the state to get married. Is this marriage legal? 2. Would either party commit bigamy by marrying again? D. T.

1. The Illinois Supreme court has held that marriages celebrated in this state in violation of the Wisconsin requirement of one year delay are invalid. We know of no decisions arising under the Iowa law.
2. We would strongly advise the parties not to contract another marriage without securing a definite adjudication annulling the prior marriage.

PURCHASER SHOULD INQUIRE.

Hebron, Ind., May 16.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—In March, 1930, I rented a 15 acre pasture from my uncle across the road from my farm. Last July my uncle died and in the fall the place was sold. I purchased a quantity of wire and nailed it to the fences around part of this rented acreage, and the rest I left on the property. This spring I went to take the wire off and the man who now owns the place refused to let me take it, saying the agent specified the wire when the sale was made. Can I take the wire, or is he allowed to keep it after it being mentioned in the sale? W. A. D.

If you were still in possession of the premises at the time he bought, then he would take subject to notice of your rights. A purchaser is supposed to make inquiry of persons in possession of real estate.

CHECK ON CLOSED BANK.

Chicago, May 15.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—If "A" draws a check on his bank payable to "B" on March 23, 1931, and "B" does not bank the check until March 30, 1931, and bank fails to open on that day, am I liable for the amount of the check? Kindly state legal number of days allowed for holding checks. A. P. K.

Sec. 185 of the negotiable instruments law is as follows: "A check must be presented for payment within a reasonable time after its issue, and notice of dishonor given to the drawer as provided for in the case of bills of exchange, or the drawer will be discharged from liability thereon to the extent of the loss caused by the delay."

TO FORM A CLUB.

Chicago, May 15.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A number of boys ranging in age from 14 to 17 wish to start a club. 1. Do we have to secure a charter? 2. Can we have a name for the club? 3. If so, where must we apply for one? 4. What can we do to hold on to our name so it can't be taken by some one else? J. W. P.

1. No.
2. Yes.
3. Simply adopt a name.
4. You would get some protection by forming a corporation not for profit. Write to the secretary of state, Springfield, for printed forms and instructions.

LONDON.—A dispatch to the Daily Chronicle from Bucharest says: "The Rumanian government is negotiating with the allies. King Ferdinand has reviewed the army and great enthusiasm prevails."

ROME.—With Austrian guns peppering the Adriatic coast from sea and air, Italy became a full fledged member of the entente. The former ally of Germany and Austria has given its adhesion to the agreement already signed by Great Britain, France and Russia not to conclude a separate peace. Austria-Hungary opened hostilities by a combined aerial and naval attack on several ports of the Adriatic coast from Venice as far south as Barletta, a distance of about 255 miles. The attack failed, according to the Italian government, the Austrian forces being compelled to withdraw. The Italians made an attack on Porto Buso, a small island at the head of the Adriatic. The guns of an Italian destroyer wrecked the town on the island and sank all the craft in the harbor.

CHICAGO.—Chicago, a city with a population of more than 80,000 Italians, is expected to send its quota of 10,000 reservists to war. The estimate was made by Count Giulio Bolognesi, Italian consul in Chicago. Thirty young men of Chicago studying for the priesthood are in Rome. The Right Rev. Thomas Kennedy, director of the North American college at Rome, has informed Archbishop Quigley that the men in his institution are in no danger.

CHICAGO.—As Lewis W. Stone, 84 years old, wealthy real estate man, entered the barn of his home, 4316 Michigan avenue, he was beaten, choked into insensibility and robbed. His recovery from the injuries he suffered is uncertain. Mr. Stone makes his own collections and it is supposed the robber had expected to find $1,000 in his pocket. Instead the loot was only $11.

PARIS.—There is much excitement in Paris over news of the departure of the cruiser Chanzy to join the French fleet now before Tangier, Morocco. The French fleet menacing Tangier has grown until it is formidable. A division of troops may be sent from Marseilles to Algiers to meet any emergency.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—The funeral of former Gov. Tanner is to be a military one. The body will be taken from the home of Turney English, Mrs. Tanner's father, tomorrow morning, escorted by the 5th infantry, I. N. G.; a section of artillery, and cavalry Troop D of this city. The body will lie in state in the rotunda of the Capitol building until the time to depart for services at the church. Interment will be in Oak Ridge cemetery, almost within the shadow of the tomb of Abraham Lincoln.

CHICAGO. — Mrs. Arthur Tree, daughter of Marshall Field of Chicago, was married on May 22 in London to Capt. David Beatty of the royal navy. Cable reports of the marriage were confirmed by Marshall Field. Capt. Beatty is the youngest captain in the British navy and has had a distinguished career.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 25, 1881.

LONDON, Ont.—A terrible disaster occurred on the River Thames, a mile west of this city, when the pleasure steamer Victoria with 600 passengers on board foundered under the weight of the great load and capsized with half of its living freight underneath. In an instant there was a frightful panic and in the life and death struggle which ensued about 175 persons perished. The whole ship collapsed like an eggshell and its various parts lay flat upon the water. The rotten vessel was carrying holiday excursionists celebrating the 62d anniversary of the birth of Queen Victoria. Many of the victims were old settlers of London. About 150 bodies have been recovered. Among the dead is James Robertson, manager of the Bank of British North America. The accident was due to gross carelessness. The captain was expostulated with by several persons on permitting the boat to be so overcrowded, but he is reported to have replied: "I know my business."

THE SAFEGUARDING OF SAVINGS.

Chicago, May 21.—The report in this morning's TRIBUNE covering the Minneapolis speech of Thomas F. Wallace, president of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, interests me. In it he advocates the enactment by state legislatures and by congress of legislation to segregate savings from commercial bank deposits. He is quoted as stating that of 6,000 bank failures recorded during the last decade only two were of savings banks. He maintains that invasion of the savings field by commercial banks is not justified unless accompanied by legislation which would give to savings depositors the same protection that depositors in mutual savings banks now have.

I write as a commercial banker with twenty years of experience in the east and Chicago, so my opinion is not likely to be a prejudiced one. I subscribe heartily to Mr. Wallace's theory and believe in the light of current history that Illinois should attack this problem at once.

A study of protective laws in states having mutual savings banks would reveal that savings deposits can be invested only in prescribed ways. Only a certain percentage can be lent upon real estate as security, and only approved bonds can be purchased. An attempt is made to prevent the use of people's funds in the speculative field and to so surround them with safeguards that even severe business depression will not reach them. All of this is as it should be, the only weakness being that in many states these restrictions apply only to deposits in mutual savings banks and not to all savings deposits.

Quite a number of relatively small Chicago outlying banks have closed their doors during the last few months, and in many cases the savings deposit total was far above that of commercial deposits. It is probably demonstrable that a large number of these savings depositors have only limited financial knowledge and placed and kept their savings in a given bank only because of their faith in the government and in the institutions organized under it and supervised by it. They now believe that their confidence was misplaced. Surely their trouble could have been prevented to a large extent had their deposits been segregated and invested under restrictions prescribed by law. Would not this course have been worth while? Would it not have been in the interest of the banks as well as individual depositors? Would it not have tended to make savings deposits equally safe in all banks?

The state makes some provision for the protection of trust funds in Illinois. The banks cooperate and handle such funds in a very conservative way. Do not savings deposits, originating largely through the labor of the so-called working people, deserve to be classified as trust funds?

The commercial depositor is more likely to be a man of affairs, well versed in business procedure, who knows how to play the financial game and can handle his account with discretion. On the other hand, the savings depositor is more likely to be well informed only in fields remote from the financial field. It is fitting that interest return on savings should be small, provided such savings are fully protected through conservative investment. If, however, these funds are to be employed in speculative enterprises they should receive an interest return commensurate with the risk assumed. They should not be so employed, and it is reasonable and proper to continue the present interest rate to savings depositors, but the statutes should provide for the segregation and conservative investment of all savings funds.

FREDERIC S. POPE.

GOPHER PIE.

Chicago, May 19.—Might I add my quota to the illuminative and amusing editorial in today's TRIBUNE, "News from America," regarding gopher eating in Canada? I lived on the prairie in central Alberta for four years, and only one of my numerous neighbors, of many nationalities, ever ate gophers, and he was a self-styled "Pennsylvania Dutchman," although rumor, and his looks, pointed to Indian blood.

He caught them in the fall, when fat on the wheat, hung them up to freeze, and had gopher pie all winter, from choice, I imagine, as he could afford other food, and his wife and daughter ate normally. MRS. L. F. HEYER.

THE TOBACCO TAX.

New York, May 20.—We are advised that the Illinois legislature is very seriously considering the passage of a tax on cigars and tobacco products in your state.

We are not going to enter into a lengthy discussion regarding "nuisance" taxes, as we are sure that you are thoroughly familiar with the numerous attempts that have been made to pass bills of this kind in the past. We are confident, too, that you will not hesitate to take an editorial stand against the present proposed tax, since you are vitally concerned with the interests of your citizen readers. We are sure that a vigorous protest from you to your legislature would have a great deal of effect in bringing about the defeat of the proposed measure.

May we hear from you as to just what action you take in this matter?

Confident that you will use your great influence to call a halt on "nuisance" taxation, we are with best wishes, very truly yours, GEORGE S. HAMILTON, Consolidated Cigar Corporation, Advertising Department.

THE SENATE AND THE PEOPLE.

Chicago, May 13.—Your editorial Monday on "The Senate and the People," criticizing the committee of the senate which held "hearings" in Nebraska and Illinois while the primary campaign was in progress last fall, and also taking exception to the dictum of Federal Judge Munger of Nebraska that the senatorial committee was within its powers, was a fine example of what the editorials in lantern bearing newspapers [now all too scarce] should be.

As the Supreme court of the United States has held that senators and representatives are not "officers of the United States" under the constitution [article II., section 4], but are officers of the state which elects them, it follows that the power of "each house" to "judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its own members" [article I., section 5] does not exist with respect to any aspirant or candidate until he presents to the house credentials from his state identifying him as the officer whom it has chosen to sit in that body. It cannot "judge of the elections" before they have been held. More than that, the Supreme court decided in the Newberry case [256 U. S., 232] that a primary to nominate is not an election within the language of the constitution just before quoted. Accordingly, the senate committee had no more constitutional jurisdiction in Illinois and Nebraska than a junta from Mexico would have had.

Such are the deplorable results of the neglect of our educational establishment [the heaviest of all weights on the taxpayer] to teach constitutional principle, the most important subject for Americans to know, as this instance so plainly shows. Had such education been generally diffused the executive officers of the states named would have been capable of making protest against interference by a federal committee with the operations of state government. And the committee might have kept within its proper sphere.

THOMAS JAMES NORTON.

WAGES.

Chicago, May 19. — Undoubtedly the article entitled "Doak Says Any Pay Cut Would Justify Strike" will cause considerable discussion among the readers of your valued newspaper.

Frankly, I cannot see how your organization can give such an article as this front page publicity because you must know that there has been a general reduction of wages throughout the entire United States in the last year. The majority of manufacturers have reduced wages, otherwise many of these manufacturers would not be able to continue to exist in this highly competitive market. In the immediate neighborhood of Chicago and Milwaukee manufacturing plants have reduced their wages in some cases as much as 25 per cent, and in many cases selling organizations have suffered a wage reduction of as much as 50 per cent.

It is quite true that organized labor, generally speaking, has not taken a reduction in wages, but there are thousands of organized labor members working at other jobs for 50 per cent of what they would get if there were any work in their particular calling.

INDUSTRIES OPEN FIRE ON WOMEN'S EIGHT HOUR BILL

Manufacturers to Appear Before Legislators.

Protests against enactment of the women's eight hour day bill on the ground that it would drive industry out of Illinois will be laid before the committee on industrial affairs of the state house of representatives by a delegation of Illinois manufacturers in Springfield tomorrow when the committee convenes to consider the proposed law.

A large group from the Illinois Manufacturers' association is to leave for Springfield tonight in a concerted attack on the bill which already has passed the senate by a narrow margin.

While the chief argument against the proposed law will be the contention that it would force industries out of the state, the manufacturers also are prepared to argue that the bill interferes with the personal and contract rights of employés, would tend to force women out of their jobs and would decrease their earnings.

Refer to "Elimination."

In a statement made public yesterday the manufacturers referred to an "adroit process of elimination, quite effective in limiting opposition," by which they said practically all concerns except factories and laundries had been eliminated from the bill.

In its present form, they declared, its measures excludes hotels, restaurants, mercantile firms, and public utilities, which would not be restricted as to the working hours of women employés.

The manufacturers cited numerous industries which they said have moved from Illinois into Indiana and other neighboring states because of objectionable working conditions or threatened legislation in this state. They believed many more industries would follow suit if the eight hour bill is passed.

Point to Seasonal Rushes.

In another argument, the manufacturers said 62 per cent of Illinois industries have seasonal rushes, during which it is necessary to work longer hours in order to meet production and after the slack months, and they contend if the eight hour law is passed its women workers will not be able to benefit from these seasonal increases in work and earnings.

F. O. Coleman, president of the Indian Flyer Manufacturing company, who is among those to appear before the house committee, said his concern was opposed to the bill because it handicapped both employé and employer.

"We compete in our toy business with New York, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, and other states where the laws relative to women workers are more liberal than in the proposed eight hour law," Mr. Coleman said. "Our business is extremely seasonal. There are 38 toy factories in Illinois, which would be seriously handicapped, if not irreparably injured, by this bill."

Other Concerns Oppose Bill.

S. Karpen & Bros., furniture manufacturers, in expressing opposition to the bill, said the passage of such a measure "would close many factories, resulting in lost jobs."

The General Spring Bumper corporation asserted that if the bill is passed "it would materially affect the operations of our plans, as we have our department operated entirely by women. We would have to operate our entire factory on the eight hour basis or else we would have to replace these women with men, and in many instances these women are supporting homes and need the work."

The F. L. Klein Noodle company expressed its opposition to the proposed law, saying it would reduce the pay of the women employés.

Says Women Employés Object.

A. H. Swett, president of the American Tag company, said the women employés of his company object to the bill because they operate on a five day week and the eight hour law would "seriously inconvenience them."

The American Can company said its women employés objected to the bill and have signed petitions protesting its passage.

The Loose-Wiles Biscuit company said the greater number of its women employés are against the measure on the ground that it deprives them of their right to contract for their own time in employment.

Hundreds of loop goers gathered at Clark and Madison streets last night to watch firemen battle and conquer a blaze which swept through the haberdashery store of Louis Aron at 30 South Clark street. UNIFORM LAW TO CURB AUTOMOBILE THEFTS IS URGED ON STATES

New York, May 24.—[Special.]—A uniform law regulating theft information, ownership records and registration to check the growing evil of automobile thefts and the use of stolen automobiles by criminals is recommended to all states by the national crime commission in a report made public today by J. Weston Allen, chairman of the commission.

The report is the result of a study by a special committee appointed by the commission composed of experts in automobile finance and insurance. Col. A. B. Barber, director of the national conference on street and highway safety of Washington, D. C., is chairman of the committee.

Motor vehicle frauds and theft losses are so large as to present a serious problem of major interest to the public, the report points out. The cause of these losses is attributed to the lack of a uniform anti-theft law. Such a uniform law has been proposed and in substance is in operation in 25 states. The committee recommends this uniform law for enactment in all states as an effective means to correct present conditions and to bring about a reduction in motor vehicle thefts and frauds.

The committee also recommends the enactment by congress of the bill which makes criminal the transportation in interstate or foreign commerce of property stolen or taken feloniously by fraud or with the intent to steal or purloin. The bill passed the house of representatives but did not reach the senate during the last session of congress.

REP. SOL BLOOM HAS GRIEVANCE; FESS IS BLAMED

Washington, D. C., May 24.—[Special.]—Representative Sol Bloom [Dem., N. Y.], millionaire music publisher and originator of the Midway Plaisance at Chicago's World's Fair, is angry.

Sol has been working without pay as director of the Washington bicentennial commission. He is presiding over an establishment of ninety employés, getting ready to make the event next year one to be remembered.

Now along comes Simeon D. Fess [Rep., O.], vice chairman of the commission (President Hoover being chairman), and calls a meeting of the executive committee tomorrow to appoint a co-director. While the job of director is without salary, the job of co-director commands a salary of $10,000 as provided by congress, though nobody seems to know just how it happened.

Mr. Bloom suspects that Mr. Fess, who is chairman of the Republican national committee, plans to hand the co-director's job to a Republican lame duck.

HONDURAS ARMY CRUSHES REBELS; DEAD DOT FIELDS

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, May 24.—(AP)—The government reported tonight it had dealt a crushing blow to the rebel army under Gen. Ferrera in a battle near Tela.

The battlefield, it said, was left covered with rebel dead and it was believed victory means "the beginning of the end" of the revolution.

The rebels, it was said, did not reach Tela and got no nearer than Las Palmas, about five miles away.

U. S. BOARD WILL STUDY BUILDING MATERIAL TRADE

Will Examine Limestone Versus Marble War.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 24.—[Special.]—The time honored war in and out of congress between the "Indiana limestone bloc" and New England's "granite bloc" and "marble bloc" is to be a subject of inquiry by the federal trade commission. The commission announced today that it was about to undertake a thorough investigation of the building material industry and in particular these phases of the industry involved in the letting of government contracts for public buildings.

And the scrap between the purveyors of the three building stones and the geographic groups supporting them is to furnish, it is promised, one of the principal fields to be looked into.

That this would be the case was verified today by Senator Henrik Shipstead, Minnesota's Farmer-Labor member in the upper house.

Commission Announcement.

The commission's announcement, which stated that preliminary work was already under way, was as follows:

"In this inquiry the commission will investigate and report facts relating to the letting of contracts for the construction of government buildings, particularly with a view of determining whether or not there are or have been any price fixing or other agreements, understandings or combinations of interests among individuals, partnerships, or corporations engaged in the production, manufacture or sale of building materials with respect to the prices or other terms at or under which such materials will be furnished contractors or bidders for such construction work."

Senator Shipstead said today that he introduced the resolution because of complaints that such collusion between the purveyors of building materials did exist and because of further complaints, seemingly aimed at the handling of contracts by the government itself, that specifications for buildings were so framed that they unfairly limited the sources from which materials could come.

Indiana Seems Influential.

The limestone-granite-marble controversy falls in the latter category. The charges are that Indiana's advocates have been too influential and have somehow or other put "Indiana limestone" into the specifications for too many government buildings.

Chief among the persuaders, it has been openly alleged on the floor of the house, has been Representative Will R. Wood. It has also been remarked in house debate that Senator James E. Watson hails from Indiana, as did the former committee chairman, Richard N. Elliott.

New York Central Abandons Steam Engines in Manhattan

New York, May 24.—[Special.]—The use of steam locomotives by the New York Central railroad on its west side freight line on Manhattan island will be discontinued by the first of July, nearly three years before it was anticipated, Manhattan Borough President Samuel Levy announced today. They will be replaced by electric and Diesel-electric engines.

When the west side improvement agreement between the City of New York and the railroad was signed it was stipulated that the use of steam locomotives north of 72d street was to be terminated by July 3, 1931, electric power and electric locomotives to be substituted. The work of electrifying this section of the road is practically completed and the new motive power will be placed in service within a few weeks.

Replaced by Electric.

From Seventy-second street south to St. John's park the agreement provided that steam engines were to be replaced by electric or Diesel-electric locomotives not later than the time when the tracks of the railroad are removed from the surface of the street, a condition still some years away.

However, already the use of steam locomotives for switching has been materially reduced and by the end of June milk, mail and express trains, the only services in which steam engines are consistently used at present, will be hauled by the electric and Diesel-electric replacements.

Recent Survey Made.

A recent survey made under Borough President Levy's direction shows that considerable progress is being made along the whole west side preparatory to the elimination of the railroad tracks from the streets. The wrecking of buildings from the Thirtieth street yard south to Canal street is about 90 per cent finished and the remainder of the work is under contract and should be completed soon, the survey shows. Construction of the foundations for the railroad's new Spring street terminal betwen Charlton, Clarkson, West and Washington streets will be begun shortly.

Within a few days contracts will be awarded for the foundations for the elevated structure which will carry the railroad between the new terminal and the Thirtieth street yard.

L Highways Well Along.

The foundations for the section of the elevated express highway between Fifty-ninth and Seventy-second streets are already eighty per cent completed, the borough president stated, and the work should be completed within a month. Erection of steel work for the superstructure of the express highway between these points has already begun and the section is expected to be opened for service within a year.

GIRL IS SOUGHT IN HOLLYWOOD'S DOUBLE MURDER

Los Angeles, Cal., May 24.—(AP)—Police maintained watch at half a dozen places here today for June Taylor, presumed to have important information in connection with the slaying last Wednesday in Hollywood of Charles H. Crawford, political boss, and Herbert Spencer, magazine editor.

Joseph Ford, special prosecutor, at the same time began preparation of his case against David H. Clark, municipal judgeship candidate, accused of killing the two men.

Miss Taylor, confidante of Albert Marco, vice racketeer, now in San Quentin prison, is reported to have been seen with Clark prior to the tragedy, and the district attorney's office believes she may have knowledge of the cause.

Booze Peddler Confesses Killing Gary Bootlegger

Alonso McCulley, a Negro booze peddler, confessed last night that he shot and killed Charles Lemola, 50 years old, of 1837 Madison street, Gary, early yesterday morning in Gary. The shooting, McCulley said, occurred during a quarrel with Lemola, his former employer, after the Negro had gone to work for Joe Sannicola, another alleged bootlegger. Sannicola is being held as a witness.

KILLS HIMSELF IN HOME.

Claude H. Killinger, 52 years old, laborer, who had been out of work for months, killed himself by slashing his throat yesterday at his home, 4621 North Damen ave.

Cash Tied Up Abroad, This Man Tries Want Ad for Aid

Odd Circumstances Revealed in Letter

REFINED, AMIABLE COUPLE, NO children and best of references offers comfortable home for life to middle aged lady or gentleman. In small city, all modern conveniences, pleasant surroundings. Climate has no extreme heat or cold, healthiest part of United States. No services required but an investment of $5,500, which will be amply protected by good negotiable mortgage. Sum can be returned in five years if desired to terminate agreement. Reply box 0000, Edinburg, Lower Rio Grande Valley, Texas.—From Real Estate Loans.

Because the Commonwealth of Australia had declared an embargo on shipping capital out of that country, this advertiser, who had several thousand pounds sterling in Sydney, Australia, banks, was forced to get money from another source. He choose the plan set forth in the above want ad!

Investigated Carefully

Before accepting this want ad for publication, the Tribune investigated the offer carefully, just as is done with all unusual offers submitted for publication in the Tribune Want Ad Section. In this case, the records revealed that the advertiser was a responsible research engineer. The security offered was a well furnished home in a small town and a grapefruit grove of 25 acres, unincumbered, including also the necessary farm machinery. Furthermore, the advertiser owned property near Chicago.

Want Ads Always Interesting

There is hardly a column in the Tribune Want Ad Section that does not contain several want ads of unusual interest. Not all of them have such unusual stories attached to them, but it's always interesting to find a bargain in some article you've always wanted, but could not afford! Make it a habit to read carefully the entire Tribune Want Ad Section, both daily and Sunday!

Five Respond to Appeal of Widower

"When my wife was killed three years ago, while I was a resident of Chicago, I was left with four small children," writes Theodore Quigley, 1538 N. Jefferson street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. "I didn't know what to do. I didn't want to put the children in an orphanage and I had no near relatives.

"A friend who had satisfactory results from Tribune Want Ads suggested that I try them.

"I did, and five applicants came to see me. I chose a very competent woman and, as a result, my children are being well cared for and reared in a homelike atmosphere. I never could have otherwise found such a high grade person, as my acquaintance was limited. Chicago Tribune Want Ads are big in results."

This true want ad experience won the $50 second prize in the Tribune's True Want Ad Experience competition.

Sells Patented Valve for $10,000

"In March, 1925, after spending $125 to advertise my patented valve in various patent magazines without results," writes Mr. E. A. Grabowski, Escanaba, Michigan, "I tried the Chicago Tribune, expecting only to bring it to the attention of prospective parties. However, to my surprise, ten days after my want ad appeared in the Chicago Tribune I sold my valve patent in Toronto, Canada, for $10,000."

Answer's Tuner's Ad; Gets Voice Pupils

"My piano needed tuning, and while looking for Want Ad Wanda's ads I came across the name of a piano tuner and made an appointment with him," writes Miss Selma Hummel, 619 Cornelia Avenue, Chicago.

"When he came to tune the piano he learned that I taught singing. His daughter studies with me now, and she has recommended several other pupils to me. This man's ad brought both of us a lot of business."

In a registered envelope yesterday Mayor Cermak found a letter and another envelope containing $5,000 in $100 bills. The letter was signed by a man who called himself "Good Time" Charlie Dawson, asking the mayor to give the money away to the poor.
It took a 12 page letter, written in a painful scrawl, for Good Time Charlie to explain why he had sent this money to the mayor. He wrote on stationery of the Drake hotel, where he was registered from San Francisco.
The mayor said he would have to think over the problem of distribution of the $5,000, for the donor seemed to have in mind "some young fellows that need a new start," and wrote a story of his own early troubles in Chicago and of his going west in 1920 to find his fortune.
Almost Reached Waste Basket.
"It's lucky I opened the envelope containing the money before I read the letter," said the mayor. "I

Something New in TREASURE HUNTS!

The Chicago Tribune Will Pay

a Week in CASH PRIZES

For the Best Solutions to

GOOD TIME CHARLIEGRAMS

"GOOD TIME CHARLIE" started it! The press for three days has told the bizarre story of a mythical person who sent $5,000.00 to Mayor Cermak to help bring back good times. What Good Time Charlie started the Chicago Tribune is carrying on.

The Chicago Tribune is matching Good Time Charlie's offer! This newspaper has put up $5,000.00 in cash to be distributed in an effort to speed the return of better times. $1,000.00 in cash prizes will be awarded each week for the next five weeks.

Good Time Charlie Dawson told how he had to hunt for his gold in the deserts of the West. Now Chicago Tribune readers are offered a chance to hunt for gold in the display advertising columns of this newspaper!

JUST FOLLOW THESE SIMPLE RULES:

1. Each day for seven consecutive days, daily and Sunday, various words in display advertisements which appear in the Chicago Tribune will be identified by an asterisk (*) after the word. When these words are arranged in the proper manner they will form a "Good Time Charliegram"—a message of good cheer or sound advice of interest during the present period of reconstruction. You are invited to look for these words and find the Good Time Charliegram. No words will be hidden in the Want Ads. You do NOT have to look through the Classified advertisements.

2. The Chicago Tribune will pay $1,000.00 in cash prizes to the persons who send in the most nearly correctly arranged and the neatest complete sets of Good Time Charliegrams in accordance with these rules.

3. The prizes for each week are as follows:

1st Prize	$250.00
2nd Prize	100.00
Next 2 Prizes $50.00 each	100.00
Next 4 Prizes $25.00 each	100.00
Next 25 Prizes $10.00 each	250.00
Next 40 Prizes $ 5.00 each	200.00
74 weekly prizes totaling	$1,000.00

4. This offer is open to every one—men and women, boys and girls—except employes of the Chicago Tribune and their families. You pay nothing. Just prove your skill.

5. Good Time Charliegrams are to be submitted in complete sets only. DO NOT send in each day's solution separately. Hold all Good Time Charliegrams until you have the complete set of seven (7). Then send them to "GOOD TIME CHARLIEGRAMS," the Chicago Tribune, Tribune Tower, Chicago, Illinois. All entries must be received in the Tribune office before 6 P. M. on Wednesday, June 3, 1931.

6. Contestants may submit as many sets of Good Time Charliegrams as they wish, but no contestant will be entitled to more than one prize.

7. You need NOT buy the Chicago Tribune. You may use the handy blank or you may copy your entry on a separate sheet of paper. The Tribune may be examined at any of its offices or at public libraries free of charge.

8. The judges will be appointed by the Chicago Tribune. Their decision will be final. In case of ties, a duplicate award will be paid to each tying contestant.

Authors Parade as Human Beings for This Book

While Its Author Hides Behind a Pun.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"LIVING AUTHORS," edited by "Dilly Tante" [H. W. Wilson company], contains 462 pages of biographies and photographs of 371 living authors. It might just as well be a "Who's Who," except that the mysterious editor—and whether you must call him or her, because the sketches really are written, not just assembled—has succeeded in making it so fascinating that a poor weak-eyed and weak-minded creature like me couldn't resist reading every one of the sketches.

Sherwood Anderson one day, in the middle of a letter he was dictating when he was manager of a paint factory, put on his hat and walked out of the factory.

Hilaire Belloc's royalties from "The Green Hat" amounted to over half a million dollars.

Between finishing one piece of work and beginning another Mary Austin eats what she describes as "jamwiches," in which she makes enough jam and jelly for all her friends.

Stephen Vincent Benet cherishes the belief that he is related to Black John, the Mexican bandit.

Arnold Bennett wrote not long ago of his diary: "I have written between 9 and 10 books, but also I have only three—'The Old Wives' Tale,' 'The Card' (American title, 'Henry Jones Adviseur'), 'Clayhanger,' and 'Riceyman Steps.'"

After the armistice Mary Borden found herself the possessor of five war crosses—the Legion of Honor, the Croix de Guerre, the French gold medal of the Service de Santé, and two British war medals. She was born in Chicago.

Of his own novels Louis Bromfield has lost "The Green Bay Tree" and kept "Early Autumn."

Willa Cather tried to live in France, but her nostalgia for Nebraska was so great that she haunted the wheat fields and cried silently when she smelled the harvesting.

The youngest writer mentioned among "Living Authors" is Viña Delmar (9) and the two next youngest are Gordon Cullen (19) and Langston Hughes (19), both Negroes.

Broderick Ellis is an excellent cook.

John Erskine wrote "The Private Life of Helen of Troy" between 11 p. m. and 1 a. m. from January to June, 1925.

Miss Farber's first writing job was on the Appleton (Wis.) Daily Crescent at $5 a week.

Ernest Hemingway published his first two books in his very young manhood with money saved penny by penny during the years of his apprenticeship as a soldier.

Ernest Hemingway, at a middleweight championship bout in Paris, became incensed with the foul blows of the winner and jumped into the ring and knocked out the champion.

The first manuscript of Joseph Hergesheimer's to be accepted was a recipe for stuffed cabbage, published over the editor's signature.

James Joyce said to William Butler Yeats at their first meeting: "We have met too late: you are too old to be influenced by me."

"Main Street" was conceived when Sinclair Lewis was a student at Yale. He began his literary career by writing jokes for Life and Puck. He was the janitor of Upton Sinclair's famous Utopian colony, Helicon Hall.

Emil Ludwig's father, Hermann Cohn, gave his son that name at birth to spare him the difficulty of bearing a Jewish name.

John Masefield (who is now the mildest of men) was indentured as a boy to a merchant ship to curb his reckless spirit and wild nature.

"Of Human Bondage" is fundamentally the story of the first thirty years of the life of its author, Somerset Maugham.

After more than forty years of diligence, and despite the fact that he has written some of the most beautiful prose in English, George Moore still has trouble with grammar and spelling.

Erich Maria Remarque was at one time, conscious or not of the bitter and gigantic irony of the gesture, organist in a madhouse. The manuscript of "All Quiet on the Western Front," was rejected by several publishers. It was translated into 29 languages and sold approximately 4,000,000 copies.

Eugene O'Neill has sketched the outlines of more than 30 coming plays.

E. Phillips Oppenheim has published 116 books since 1887.

Whenever Frank Swinnerton completes a book he sits down to a hot plum pudding, no matter how warm the weather.

Booth Tarkington never wanted to be a writer. He wanted to be an illustrator.

Carl Van Vechten always has a celebrated person witness his signature to his contracts. Hugh Walpole, Theodore Dreiser, Charlie Chaplin, and Texas Guinan have been among them.

H. G. Wells' father was the son of a gardener, a professional cricketer, and kept a small china shop. His mother was a lady's maid before her marriage.

Good morning!

It stags about a young married pair of university graduates who separate to make good. I. E.—Johnny, who has a brass band, goes overseas to burn up Paris. Claire, or Mac, as everybody calls her, flies to New York, where, double presto, she becomes first secretary, then assistant to the power behind an advertising agency. She keeps her marriage a secret—until her happy-go-lucky Johnny—who got lonesome for her—shows up to spill the beans at a most unpropitious moment.

Now Johnny and Mac are, really, deeply in love. The Boss also loves the lady, but in a different fashion. His propositioning having done him no good, he decides he must have her even if he has to marry her.

But she's already married, you say in your sweet, innocent way. Sure—but if you think a little thing like that fact would fease Ralph Clayton—reflect again. He gets busy—with a lie here and a wire pulled there. Only to learn how smart Mr. Burns was when he remarked:

The best laid plains o' mice an' men
Gang aft agley.

"Big Business Girl" is nicely staged and competently directed. Loretta Young wears some good looking clothes. She and Frank Albertson are appealing in the leading romantic rôles. Ricardo Cortez plays the hevamp to good advantage, and Dorothy Christy does a lady of the species in writhing fashion that's rather effective.

See you tomorrow!

Ambassador Edge Is Confirmed at Cathedral in Paris

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 24.—Sitting in the front pew, in a special confirmation class consisting of two members, Ambassador Walter E. Edge was confirmed in the Episcopal faith this morning, joining the fashionable American cathedral of Holy Trinity in George V. avenue just off the Avenue Champs Elysees.

Ambassador Edge avoided going through the ceremony with 21 youngsters in their early teens who were also confirmed today, by means of the prearranged early service. The other member of the ambassador's class was Charles H. Burke, who is the assistant to C. Bascom Slemp, the American commissioner to the French colonial exposition.

Like his younger fellows of the confirmation class, Ambassador Edge received his theological instruction from Canon George C. Gibbs. He received the administration of the apostolic rite and the laying on of hands from Bishop Hugh J. Burleson. Only the members of the two families were present at the confirmation service.

Immediately upon the completion of the ceremony Ambassador Edge hurried along the Quai d'Orsay over to the other Protestant church, called the American church, where he presided over a poppy drive service, thereby avoiding an undiplomatic impression that he was giving too much attention to any one particular church.

Museum Expedition Ready to Start 1931 Work in Southwest

The Field museum expedition to the southwest, which conducted archaeological excavations during the summer of 1930, is about to begin 1931 operations at the Lowry ruin in southwestern Colorado. Dr. Paul S. Martin, assistant curator in charge of North American archaeology at the museum, will leave today for Colorado.

The Lowry ruin represents the culture of Indians who lived 1,500 years ago. The first few weeks of work this season will be devoted to continuation of the excavation of a subterranean ceremonial chamber and a number of living rooms revealed by spades last year.

No burial ground has yet been discovered. Since it is from burial mounds and rubbish heaps that archaeologists glean most of their knowledge of the past further search for a burial ground is to be made.

Dr. Martin, accompanied by the museum's staff modeler, John G. Prasuhn, are to stop en route to Colorado at the Dakota Indian reservation at Pine Ridge, S. D.

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, May 24.—Jules Jesserand, former French ambassador to Washington, in a book entitled "The Sentiments of the Americans During the War," which has just appeared, recalls how on Oct. 16, 1915, he appealed to President Wilson in behalf of two French women condemned to death by the Germans and how the President, after hesitating between neutrality and humanity, intervened through Ambassador Gerard at Berlin and obtained the commutation of the sentences to imprisonment.

M. Jusserand received a cablegram from Paris that Mlle. Jeanne de Bettignies of Lille and Mlle. Thuliez, a professor at Liege, had been condemned to death and that an English woman had been recently executed by the Germans, referring to Miss Edith Cavell. M. Jusserand was asked to appeal to President Wilson on the French women's behalf.

"I telephoned Secretary of State Lansing," M. Jusserand says. "His maitre d'hotel, a Negro with old time devotion, replied that the secretary of state was at the theater and that he would call me when he returned. He did call me toward midnight and made, a matter of form no doubt, some objection at first.

"'Why more forbearance for women than for men?' he asked.

"'Because they are weaker and because their heroism is more meritorious,' I replied. 'During the civil war many women of the south did in your country as these women have done, without it occurring to anybody that death ought to be their punishment.'

"Mr. Lansing was touched and he advised me to ask an audience of the President at the earliest hour in the morning.

Early the next morning, without encountering anything of the habitual desire of the President to see as few visitors as possible, I was received. President Wilson was visibly moved, but when it came to taking action he became disquieted and was preoccupied with precedents and with the consequences for his neutrality.

"I wanted him to cable directly to the German emperor to make him understand the enormities committed by his subordinates, so that even if by mischance the steps taken today were too late to save the unfortunates, others might be saved. The idea of a telegram to William II. was very repugnant to him. I think I said that these women were condemned to death for having rescued men whose duty it was to defend their country and who were themselves menaced by death.

"'If American women were on the point of being shot under similar circumstances and you appealed to our President, do you thing he would hesitate to telegraph?' I asked.

"'The matter does not concern us directly,' Mr. Wilson answered. 'If we use our influence now, what will remain to us of that influence when we are concerned?'

"To which I replied: 'But it does concern you. It is not a question of neutrality, but of humanity. It is for you, who have the right to pardon, to suggest to another head of a state that he use that right. As for influence, it does not resemble a substance that wears with use, but a substance that rusts with lack of use, like a knife.'

"The President hesitated between those two thoughts of neutrality and humanity. He ended by saying that he must discuss the matter with his secretary of state.

"Later in the morning I was at Mr. Lansing's and learned that I had scarcely left the White House when the President, ceding to his better instincts, had talked with Mr. Lansing by telephone. A cablegram had been sent at 9:30—not to the kaiser, it is true, but to Ambassador Gerard in Berlin, begging him in the name of the President to take all necessary steps.

"Mr. Gerard acted at once and cabled that commutation of the sentence was probable. The death penalty was, in fact, commuted to imprisonment, but one of the two French women, Mlle. De Bettignies, who was of frail health, could not endure the treatment she received in her prison and died there."

PAULA SCHLUETER'S RECITAL CONCLUDES BERTHA OTT SERIES

With Paula Schlueter's song recital at the Playhouse yesterday afternoon, the long series of musical events managed by Miss Bertha Ott came to the end of the season. Miss Schlueter deserves to rank among the fairly well favored artists of the list. Her voice is a soprano of excellent tone, almost if not entirely developed to its fullest usefulness. Clarity of words in her texts is not altogether complete, but she approaches her melodies from the point of view of a musician, and she has made a wide and successful search for good melodies.

The second group in her program, devoted to German songs, was almost entirely unfamiliar, and at least one of them, Richard Trunk's "Schnitterlied," takes a high rating for its seemly construction and attractive nature. Elsewhere on her program was a group from the old Italian, another of modern Russian, and a third of English. Ann Gordon played restrained but sympathetic accompaniments.

THE STAGE

"MEET MY SISTER."

THE CAST.

Irma ..... Olive Olsen
Otto H. Finkel ..... Harry Welsh

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

CHARMING is the right word for "Meet My Sister," the show that has come to the Grand Opera house to put a bead of mirth and melody upon the waning theatrical season. It is a crisp, refreshing bit of entertainment in a civilized vein. Its gayety is graceful; its tunes are suave, and its performance is adept. It is, moreover, out of the beaten track of song-and-dance diversions, and may be classified as a novelty.

For the sake of an easy label, one might call "Meet My Sister" a pocket operetta. It represents a rebellion against the tradition of the chorus girl. Its rich score, including sixteen numbers, is intrusted to its handful of brilliant principals, and thus its story ripples along without the customary interruptions of the so-called ballet.

This unorthodox stroke of stage management does not thin out the show. There is no meagerness of amusement in "Meet My Sister." On the contrary, Bettina Hall, the prima donna, has values that more than compensate for the loss of forty-eight dancing legs. One may concentrate for an evening upon Bettina without pining for a sudden invasion of "the girls."

To this playgoing generation, "Meet My Sister" is something new. It probably marks the beginning of a vogue for "intimate" musical shows. Stage historians, however, will find it merely the revival of an old form. It is the "vaudeville-operette" of the European theater. It has had many predecessors on the American stage. "Madame Sherry," a notable success of twenty years ago, was a diversion of this type, although it ran to the humor of farce rather than of romantic comedy.

"Meet My Sister" sandwiches its two acts between a prologue and epilogue in a French divorce court. Its quaint love story is told as visualized evidence at the trial, and the happy ending comes when the case is dismissed. This ingenious method of slicing open the plot is one of the elements that give the piece its mood of novelty.

A certain adorable French countess [Bettina Hall] engaged a scholarly young man of middle class origin [Leo Slezak] to catalogue her library and fell in love with him. But her frank invitations to romance arouse in the callow professor of psychology nothing but the jitters. He is too class conscious to kiss a countess. When she woos him with champagne and caviar he is too bashful to respond.

So when he departs to begin teaching school in the provinces she tells him to be sure to look up her sister, who had renounced her title and gone to work in a shoe shop. The professor obeys, and when he finds that the shoe clerk sister looks exactly like the countess, except in dress, he is gullible enough not to betray the plot. His shyness vanishes; he promptly dates up the saleslady, and ends by marrying the countess.

All of which is a better story than the average, as musical comedies go, and its characters come to life persuasively in the expert acting of Miss Hall, Mr. Slezak, Harry Welsh as the shoe store boss, David Hutcheson as a titled member of the Jockey Club of Paris, and Olive Olsen as the genuine article in shoehorn damsels. They give "Meet My Sister" an admirable cast.

Miss Hall has become a neat comedienne since she appeared in "Three Little Girls." She shines as an actress now, as well as a mezzo-soprano of operatic training; and she makes the insistent countess of this romance the most attractive lyric heroine of the season.

Mr. Slezak, son of Leo Slezak of the opera stage, and a recent importation from Europe, is decidedly effective as the embarrassed professor, and must be greeted as a discovery. He makes an ingratiating character study out of the awkward, naif youth. David Hutcheon brings a Wodehouse touch of British humor to the rôle of the jilted marquis; and Harry Welsh puts acrobatic fun into the performance by running up and down stepladders in the shoe store with simian alacrity.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

What is regarded by religious leaders as the most comprehensive religious survey ever made in a great city is now nearing completion in Chicago. For the last two years Prof. Arthur E. Holt of the Chicago Theological seminary, in coöperation with the Chicago Church federation, has been directing the work of students of a number of local theological seminaries as they comb the city for facts bearing on its religious life.

This morning at the Central Y. M. C. A. the united ministers meeting held under church federation auspices will hear an extensive report on the survey from Prof. Holt. The report will point to the complex character of any thoroughgoing religious survey which must take into consideration such matters as movement of population, economic, industrial, and racial factors.

"Chicago is a spreading, tangled, and fading mass of old world racial groups heavily loaded with mutual prejudices which can be played upon by demagogues of every description," Dr. Holt's report states, as he referred to influence of race and nationality on religious matters.

The survey, Dr. Holt points out, opens "many windows through which we may look at Chicago." One of the windows is racial and national groupings. Another is statistical. The survey is based upon the population figure of 7,020,000 for metropolitan Chicago to be reached by 1950. This means a growth for the coming twenty year period estimated at nearly 2,500,000.

Dr. Holt's report cites the fact that Chicago was first settled by older American stock which brought Methodists, Baptists, Congregationalists, and Episcopalians. This stock, Dr. Holt says, is now pressed against the lake front or scattered through the suburbs by the succeeding waves of immigration to the city.

Following that first settlement of American stock, Dr. Holt continues, the second settlement was from 1360 to 1890.

"During the second settlement period," Dr. Holt reports, "the newcomers were from north Europe and they brought an increase in the Lutheran and Irish Catholic churches. The third period begins with 1890 and continued to the world war. During that period the immigrants were from southern and eastern Europe and they established and increased the number of Italian, Polish, and Bohemian Catholic churches, and the Jewish synagogues. At the end of this period the largest church in Chicago was a Catholic church."

In the final period of the settlement of the city—from 1917 until now—Dr. Holt's report points out, the newcomers are from rural America, both white and colored, and from Mexico. This latest settlement, the report reveals, has increased the strength of Protestantism and cites a colored Baptist church as the largest.

"The three major groupings in Chicago," the report continues, "are Roman Catholic, Jewish, and Protestant. The system of administration in each is essentially different from the others. The Roman Catholic is centralized in control and has a parish system which completely covers the city. In 1926 it had 601,492 members in 250 churches. The geographical parish is supplemented by racially adopted parishes which are expected ultimately to fade from the picture, leaving a carefully planned system of geographical parishes.

"The Protestant forces seek to coordinate their activities through the Federation of Churches and a board of strategy known as the comity commission. The issue which faces the Protestant churches can be stated as follows: Can the Protestant churches by coöperative planning accomplish what the Roman Catholic church accomplishes by centralizing administration?"

Dr. Holt asserts in his report the survey shows that "disintegration of Protestant churches often matches the disintegration of the community. The delinquency areas of Chicago are the area of weak Protestant churches. On the other hand, the areas least able to support many churches often have the most support and those most able to support churches are the areas with the smaller number of strong churches. The survey is the first step toward a wiser planned religious economy."

"The city is coming to be conceived as a unit of religious administration.

"Recognition is being given to the natural distribution of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish populations which determine the locations of churches of these groupings.

"In those populations of the city which are not traditionally predisposed to Protestantism, all experience tends to show that the price of Protestant success is freedom from Protestant competition.

"The excessive mobility of the city is putting a strain on certain churches. This strain is being shared by the corporate church.

"Competition between denominations is being removed by reorganization of parishes into larger units.

"Vigorous leadership in the city wins a response from the public.

"Churches are succeeding which take account of the needs of their communities.

"There is no indication that labor is deserting the church. From generation to generation, laboring people have built the largest churches.

"The recent period of unemployment has witnessed an improvement in the quantity and quality of service for homeless men.

"The churches are seeking to understand the newcomers to Chicago and to give them special service at their points of entry.

"There is evidence that fundamental reconstructions in the inner area of Chicago are now under way. These changes have profound significance for religious institutions."

THE CLICK OF THE GATE

By Alice Campbell

SYNOPSIS.

Clare, fifteen year old daughter of Iris de Bertincourt, disappears mysteriously. She and her mother lived in a remote section of Paris. Clare attended a school play one evening and was brought home by friends. Her mother heard the car stop in front of the house and Clare's friends bidding her good night, but when she opened the door Clare had vanished.

Iris has been separated for years from her husband, Marcel de Bertincourt, a man of great charm, but no moral sense. They are cousins and the possible heirs of their tyrannical Aunt Victoire, the Comtesse de Castelmaurou.

Iris planned to divorce her husband and marry Maj. Alan Charnwood. Charnwood, about to depart for Africa, has postponed his trip to help Iris.

Iris moves to her aunt's home. When she arrives she learns that her husband is already domiciled there. He seems to have changed in character, and has taken charge of the search for Clare. He has been seeing Clare, unknown to her mother, for some time past, and knows more of the child's life and her friends than Iris.

Alan is refused admittance at the home of the comtesse. Iris sees him secretly and tells him that on account of her aunt's financial assistance she cannot offend her. They plan to meet at Helen Roderick's, the American woman for whom Iris has been working. Alan meets Marcel at Helen's and learns that they are friends, unknown to Iris. He recalls having seen Marcel at Le Touquet, gambling heavily, and homobbing with a coarse looking couple. Alan runs across an old friend, Tommy Rostetter, a journalist, and asks his help. They drop in a café, where Alan sees the woman who was one of De Bertincourt's companions in Le Touquet. They go to Tommy's apartment. Tommy shows Alan an apartment opposite, formerly Marcel's but now occupied by Suzanne Marly, an actress. As he is leaving, Alan sees Marcel entering Miss Marly's home. Helen tells Alan that she had dinner with Marcel the night Clare disappeared. Alan receives a wire giving him an extra fortnight's leave in Paris.

INSTALLMENT XXXI.

RANSOM.

With a look of relief, Tommy turned back to the perusal of a letter evidently just arrived. Charnwood noticed it was postmarked "Dijon," and bore a large splash of green sealing wax stamped with a crest. He saw, too, that Tommy elevated his brows over its contents and frowned thoughtfully as though puzzled.

"One lives and learns," murmured the journalist, reaching for the tobacco jar. "Only the wheat is so confoundedly mixed with the chaff, and I was never much good as a sorter. If one only knew what to make of this . . . "

"Are you talking to me?" asked Charnwood bluntly.

Tommy stared at him. "No," came the cool reply. "No, on the whole you may take those remarks as purely rhetorical. Let's see, where were we?" He eyed the jar as though it were some unfamiliar object distasteful in the extreme. "Good God!" he cried, thrusting it from him, "what the devil are we about not to think of our stomachs? Food—that's the immediate necessity. Come, put on that British bowler of yours, which so vividly recalls St. James street and let me lead you to a place where oysters are oysters."

On the far side of the square they came upon a luxurious motor coupe with a smart chauffeur in attendance. The click of small heels echoed from the adjacent court, and suddenly there flashed before their eyes a vision of loveliness closely followed by a porcine male.

"See who that is?" whispered Tommy with a nudge.

It was indeed Marly herself, wrapped to the chin in snowy ermine, all the henna tinted hair of her arrogant little head brushed into careless duck-tails after the latest mode. Staccato speech rattled from her lips with the rhythm of a machine gun, her queer yellow eyes, set like daisy centers in the midst of their spiked lashes, swept the Englishmen with a hard appraisement. She swished her skirts into the coupe, the lights blacked out, and all that remained of her passing was a hot house fragrance stalling the air.

"What is it?" she demanded urgently. "Why are you here?"

Staring after the vanishing car, Charnwood said speculatively, "I wonder if De Bertincourt is still in that woman's clutches, or if they're merely—friends?"

"Qui sait?" returned Tommy casually. "One hears she's remarkably like a drug habit—hard to give up, and leaves you with a sinking, empty feeling; but you never can tell. Here, let's nab that approaching taxi. When we're properly fed we shall be better prepared to sit quiet and let things happen."

But nothing would happen, of that Charnwood was perfectly sure, and a deadly depression had robbed him of all appetite.

The garcon tapped on the door.

"A lady to see you, monsieur—in the lounge. She did not give her name."

Charnwood sprang up. A lady? Helen, of course, but what could bring her here at five-thirty in the midst of her rush time? A horrible certainty seized him. Bad news! Somehow, somewhere, Clare's body had been found. He knew it.

The lounge was empty but for a single, expectant figure, whose agitation he sensed even through the glass doors.

"Iris, my darling, what is it?"

She turned with a cry he never forgot, her feverish eyes dilated.

"Alan, she's found! We've had news at last!"

"Clare's found?"

"Yes, yes, she's alive, I shall soon see her. O, my God, it's too good to be true!"

A thunderbolt clove the darkness. He felt stunned and stupid.

"How do you know this?" he stammered.

"A letter, this morning. She's well, safe . . . it is ransom after all. O, Alan——"

Her strength deserted her. He put out his arm to catch her as she swayed, ready to crumple to the floor.

. . . . . .

Early that morning Iris had lain in bed, dry eyed, faced with another day of torture. Autumn sunshine seeping through the blue green curtains bathed the room with a sickly light which gave her the sensation of being trapped at the bottom of the sea, slowly drowning.

One by one the well known matutinal sounds jarred on her quivering nerves. Birds chirped clamorously, dustbins clanged, water splashed into pails in the court behind, and brisk sabots clattered over cobbles.

Charnwood's telegram lay on the small table beside her bed, where she had laid it the evening before. Some crippled instinct took comfort from the thought that this man whom she had tried to thrust out of her life persisted stubbornly in adhering to her, but that was all the message meant. Her heart was like a barren river bed in time of drought, nothing but a few worn grooves to show that there had ever been a rushing torrent. It would go on being like that, although Alan could not realise it. That was why she must be firm, not let him sacrifice himself.

A knock at her door, nervous and sharp, ran through her like an electric shock. Not Ursule—but who else would disturb her at this hour? With a contraction of sudden fear she called, "Entrez!"

The following instant she had started to a sitting posture and was huddling her bed jacket round her bare arms and neck. The visitor was her husband.

"What do you want?" she cried, as nearly resentful at this intrusion as she could be now she had no emotion left in her.

Partly dressed, he had a violet silk dressing gown bound round his slim body, and beneath she could see the quick rise and fall of his chest. His haggard eyes searched her face with a curious expression, but though his lips were parted, no sound escaped them. He cleared his throat twice.

"What is it?" she demanded urgently. "Why are you here?"

At last he spoke. "There's a letter for you, come by the first post. It has an odd look. I wondered if——"

She snatched it from him—a common envelope with the address neatly printed by hand. As she tore it open he watched her intently, every fine drawn muscle vibrating with tense apprehension. A swift glance, then she uttered a cry.

"It's Clare! O, O, can it be true? Look, see what it says."

"Impossible! I——I here, read it to me, I can't make it out——"

It was a fact that he was so violently agitated he could not even hold the paper. He steadied himself against the bedpost while, in a shaking voice, she read the following strange communication:

"Madame: Your daughter is safe, but under restraint. It is idle to continue the search; the last week will prove to you that the detectives can never find her. If you accede to our demands, obeying every detail of these instructions, you will have her back by midday on Saturday at latest. Refuse or deviate in any way, however small, from the stipulated plan and you will have only yourself to thank for her death. Our risk is great; we are taking no chances. Let this be clearly understood."

As though cords binding him had snapped, Marcel gave way, burying his face in the covers. He hardly seemed to hear Iris as she went on:

"Our price is three million francs, payable in advance, and in the following manner: First, the money must be in notes of small denominations, none exceeding a hundred francs. Second, no mark of any kind must be placed upon any of them, as an attempt to trace us by means of the payment will be a signal for prompt punishment wreaked on the prisoner. Third, the notes must be brought by M. de Bertincourt, traveling alone in his own car, to the spot indicated, together with the prescribed route, on the enclosed map. Fourth, any communication with the police will be deemed a breach of faith and dealt with as such. We have ample means of checking your movements, so be careful what you do.

"These are our conditions. Act fairly by us and no harm will come to your child. Betray us and you will never set eyes on her again, dead or alive."

A FRIEND IN NEED

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Asks for Man's Clothing.

"Do you think you could get me a suit, size 38; shoes, size 6, and shirts, size 16, through your column? I have been out of work for months, cannot find anything, and need clothing badly. "J. M."

If you wear the sizes this man asks for, perhaps you will have a suit or a shirt or a pair of shoes which you won't be wearing again. He'd be extremely happy to get them.

"Lemonade Girls" Are Popular, but Liquor Lassies Prove Passe

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Jimmie, Bubbles, and Wendy—three "lemonade girls." That's what they call themselves and what the boys call them. This distinguishes them from the girls who call for stronger drink, so the report goes.

The mere fact that there is such a division among girls sort of sends the cold shivers up an oldtimer's spine. You want to keep on believing that stronger drink is anathema to young women; that by nature and preference the lemonade taste would register all girl votes. Yet, there are boys who claim that their popularity is nil unless they can be depended upon to furnish a beverage not of the lemonade variety. Anyway, that's their excuse for toting the hip flask.

All of this seems rather outdated to me, my impression being that with the demise of the flapper this sort of thing was considered just as passé as the boyish form and bob, and the swear words and the cheap petting. In a large and growing circle, it is out of date even to discuss liquor as a problem among the young, the young themselves having solved the question to every one's satisfaction by refusing to have anything to do with it. And that's straight news. If you're really quite up to the minute on things, you just don't have anything to do with hard drinks. It isn't smart, any more.

Jimmie, Bubbles, and Wendy, the three lemonade girls, have a bit of advice for boys who still think they're out of luck with girls, without liquor on the hip:

"No such thing as being out of luck with girls," they advice. "If you just won't get it and the girls ask for it, give them a good talk and tell them that if that's all they want they'd better snap out of it pretty darn quick, because you're not going to get it.

"Of course, we're assuming that you really would be content with the company of lemonade girls. If not, you're out of our line. But we can say for three of them, anyway, that they can't be such dead ones or they wouldn't have all the dates and the good, clean fun we three have."

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Broken Appointment.

"Dear Miss Blake: Because of illness I had to break an appointment with the only girl I ever loved. I had no one to call up and explain, so I know she must be angry.

"A HEARTBROKEN LOVER."

You should have sent a note of explanation at the first possible moment. You had an excellent excuse. It may not be too late yet.

Don't Build Hopes.

"Dear Miss Blake: A certain young man is very attentive to me. He has never asked to take me out. Does he care for me? ANXIOUS."

Until he shows a more personal interest you must assume this thoughtfulness is merely to assure a congenial business relationship.

Busy Business Gal Still Finds Time to Give to Beauty Care

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

The question of whether a woman remaining in business for a number of years has as good a chance at retaining her good looks as her domestically placed sister was revived at a recent woman's meeting in New York.

The discussion petered out almost as soon as it was sprung, there being no dissenting voice to prolong interest. In other words, it is perfectly clear that one can be a long term business woman and a good looking one. In fact, it is pretty foolish to attempt to grade or classify any body of women according to vocation or position in life. You find stunners and "dowds" in every group. Among women who have all the time and money in the world you'll meet those whose interest in clothes and personal upkeep is away below par, just as you'll find in the same group women with an international reputation for chic and physical charm.

In the business world I might venture the opinion that the standard is evener, for the reason that a business woman's appearance and her efficiency are so involved in employment circles that in business a woman just has to keep herself in good trim, or unless she has a rare talent in her line, she's not particularly welcome as an office or shop asset.

I recall some distinguished observer, not long ago, announcing that New York's best dressed women were to be found at a popular business girl luncheon place. Which indicates that the business girl and women is onto her job, sartorially as well as pictorially. As for the latter, any one standing in a foyer in one of our business buildings at five-thirty must be impressed with the high grade appearance of the business girl.

My point, however, in bringing up the subject is that this high grade of personal efficiency isn't just something that's been wished on a girl. There is a great deal of personal detail back of that well groomed head and slender silhouette, of the nice distribution of color on cheek and lip, of the smartly kept heels. The demand of the smart looking girl in business has taught women what they can accomplish even with a crowded business day. But more, it proves what the necessary systematic daily upkeep does in preserving youth for those women whose business careers extend beyond the usual marriage age. For among older business women you do see some pretty inspiring examples of just what that consistent care does.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

V. F.: THE CONDITION OF "gooseflesh" needs daily care. Bathe the parts with warm water and a bland soap, using a complexion brush. The friction produced removes the scales and dead skin. Rinse, dry thoroughly, and massage with olive oil or a good skin food.

G. N.: ELECTROLYSIS IS tedious and slightly painful but the results are lasting, and, when done by a skilled operator, perfectly safe. My leaflet on superfluous hair may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

Museum in London Gives Robot a Trial at Science Lecture

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 24.—The London science museum has the latest in guides. He is a robot, who stands majestically at the entrance to one of the exhibition halls and upon being persuaded by the pressing of a button proceeds to tell the visitors all about the attractions of his department.

The robot is only being tried out as an aid to visitors wishing explanations of what they see, and if he does his job well, his brothers will be stationed throughout the science museum as well as the other museums of London.

At present his work is hindered by the fact that he in himself is a considerable attraction, but it is believed that when he ceases to fascinate the sightseers his usefulness as a guide will be greatly enhanced.

The robot works quite simply. A visitor wishing information presses a button in his side, and a specially toned disc inside begins a five minute lecture. After finishing his description of his own department the robot tells the visitors that if they do not like what he has to show, they might try another section.

He is rather hard on the sightseers, for he does not permit them to ask questions and under no circumstances will he be interrupted.

Large Parties to Attend Race Opening Today

BY THALIA

Mr. Stuyvesant Peabodys and Howard Gillette are taking large parties to the opening of the race season at Washington Park today. The Peabodys will again have a private special to take their sixty guests out to the track, and Mr. Gillette is to entertain about forty at luncheon. The latter's guests include Mr. and Mrs. Eugene V. R. Thayers, Mr. and Mrs. J. Newton Perry, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Scudder, the Barrett Wendells, Miss Alice J. Browne, Col. and Mrs. Arthur T. Langhorne, Charles Edward Love, Mrs. Edward W. White, the Max S. Mays, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Glessner, Mr. and Mrs. James Ward Thorne, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Gunthorp, Mr. and Mrs. A. Watson Armour, the Phillip L. Reeds, the Henry Dalys, and Dr. Walter H. Theobald.

Oak Brook to Open New Clubhouse.

The new Oak Brook clubhouse will be formally opened next Sunday with the first polo match of the season, between the Oak Brook Four Horsemen and Oastigny. The clubhouse is a fine example of Georgian colonial architecture in gray and ivory coloring and is built at the crest of a hill between Field No. 1 and Field No. 5. It looks out over several delightful views of the surrounding country. Mrs. W. C. Taylor, publicity chairman for the Hinsdale Junior Infant Welfare, writes that the house "directly overlooks Polo No. 5, an island field which is one of the beauty spots of Oak Brook. This island is flanked on the south by groups of oak trees through which run one of the club's bridle paths. Wild game can be seen scurrying about in nearby thickets." The Infant Welfare committee, which is managing the disposal of spectator space, reports that much interest is being taken in the sport in Chicago and the near suburbs.

The Vocational Society for Shut-Ins are to have a sale on Wednesday from 2 until 5 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Harold F. White of 4947 Kimball avenue. Assisting will be Mrs. Paul Fussell, Mrs. William A. Nitze, Mrs. Edward K. Sunny, Mrs. Bruce Hobbs, Miss Clarence W. Sills, Mrs. Walter G. Warren, Mrs. Lessing Rosenthal, and Mrs. G. M. Peters.

Mrs. Barrington Arden shore complete includes Mrs. Robert D. Clark, Mrs. Selden F. White, Mrs. Lorraine Ridberg, and Mrs. Robert [illegible].

Mrs. F. T. A. Junkin's latest house guests at her apartment in Washington are two nieces and their husbands, Col. and Mrs. Marion Somerville Battle of Roanoke, Va., and Capt. and Mrs. Vincent Morgan Miles of Little Rock, Ark., and Mrs. Edwin [illegible] of Boston. The Vicomte and Vicomtesse de Frise of New York and Mr. and Mrs. John Latne and Mrs. Robert Symington of Baltimore were also out of town guests for the musicale and dance Mrs. Junkin gave for her daughter and the Milesos. [O, yes, and she also had the musicians for the musicale, Florence Trumbull, Mildred Ryberg, and Stanley Wolfshahl at the piano, too.] Mrs. Junkin is returning to Chicago in June, bringing with her Miss Rosalie Hollyday of Baltimore.

ROUEN, France, May 24.—(AP)—St. Joan of Arc—Jeanne d'Arc to her own countrymen—who was burned at the stake 500 years ago, was honored today in a signal fashion in this city of her martyrdom.

Dignitaries of the Catholic church did her homage in ceremonies in the cathedral of Notre Dame.

Visitors from all over Normandy, from Paris and the north of France, flocked in all day. During the week there will be an elaborate program of ceremonies, reaching the climax next Saturday, the 500th anniversary of the death of the Maid of Orleans.

The American Gold Star mothers now in France have been invited to attend the concluding ceremonies, a week from today, which coincide with the French national commemoration of Mother's day.

This week will terminate with a great cortège of 3,000 participants, clad in fifteenth century garb, in which a young girl of Rouen, in medieval armor and on horseback, will be escorted through the streets by soldiers.

Young Visitors Get Glimpse of Algonquin Joy

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

Pink blossoms of wild crabapple, white hawthorne, little paths grown with young grasses, a swish of small waves lapping the sands where the new swamp grass runs down to drink—these things the little neighbors of Camp Algonquin found yesterday when they dropped in for an early summer call. The camp is in the Fox river valley, about forty miles northwest of Chicago near the town of Algonquin, and each summer it plays host to groups of mothers and children from the tenement districts of Chicago.

A dozen children from the schools of Algonquin scrambled breathlessly down ravines and over hills yesterday, making the first official inspection of the year of the treasures nature has placed in store for the lads and lassies of the city streets.

They exclaimed over what they found, and when the tour was ended there wasn't a one that wouldn't have exchanged places with a Halsted street newsie, or a little girl from Maxwell street, at least for a two weeks' outing at Camp Algonquin this summer.

"Gee, this is some swell place," sighed a brown eyed lad from Algonquin as he stood, hands in pockets, gazing forlornly at the counselor putting away the row boat. In the same vernacular will speak the boy from Halsted street in another month.

And when all the little brooks had been jumped across, the boat tested, the best spot found for steak roasts and marshmallow toasts, when the dozen boys and girls of Algonquin had made the last mad scramble up the hundred steps that scale the steep bank from the Fox river to the hill of cottages, they gathered in the huge refectory around a fire of blazing logs.

While the inspection tour went its hilarious way, Mrs. Astrid Save, the camp superintendent for many a year, matched the enthusiasm of her guests with her plans for the coming season.

"It is less than four weeks away—June 16—that Camp Algonquin will open for business," said Mrs. Save. "And business this year means just that—the business of carrying through successfully the most trying year that has faced us in all Camp Algonquin's history.

"The last winter everyone knows has wrought destruction among unfortunate families. No work. Dependence upon welfare agencies for food and shelter. That means that mothers will come to camp worn out from the ravages of too little food and too much worry. Children will come undernourished, sickly.

"It will be a considerable load that will be placed on Camp Algonquin this summer. Anticipating this, we have made plans to take at least 500 more mothers and children than before. This will crowd things, of course, but we will do the best we can."

Camp Algonquin will open the season with very few new clothes. There is a new white picket fence near the nursery where the babies will play in the sunshine. Various buildings are undergoing a change of interior decoration. For two weeks an advance staff has been putting the camp in order, airing it, sunning it, and scrubbing it in preparation for the first arrivals.

And while on the subject, THE TRIBUNE issues a call to all friends of Camp Algonquin who have been generous in the past and to those who wish to help in the trying season ahead. Gifts may be sent to the cashier of THE TRIBUNE, and will be gratefully received.

The camp is administered by the United Charities of Chicago. A part of its maintenance fund is raised by TRIBUNE readers every summer.

DE PAUL UNIVERSITY COMMENCEMENT WEEK WILL START ON JUNE 7

De Paul university will observe commencement week June 7-12. The Rev. Walter E. Case will deliver the baccalaureate sermon at St. Vincent's church at 11:30 o'clock Sunday morning, June 7. The Rev. Edwin V. Hoover will address the graduates at the commencement concert and graduation exercises of the School of Music at 8:30 o'clock Monday night, May 8 in De Paul auditorium.

James A. O'Callaghan will deliver the address at the commencement exercises of De Paul University academy at 8:30 o'clock Wednesday night of commencement week in the auditorium. Exercises of the loop high school and the secretarial school will be held there at 8:30 o'clock the following night, the Rev. Stephen E. McMahan making the address.

Graduation exercises of the university's College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, College of Law, College of Commerce, and College of Music will be held in the Chicago Civic Opera house at 2:30 o'clock Friday afternoon, June 12. The Very Rev. Francis V. Corcoran will confer the degrees. The Most Rev. Samuel Alphonsus Stritch, archbishop of Milwaukee, will deliver the address to the graduates.

Bright Sayings of the Children

Betty had two little kittens and her grandmother said it would not do to keep both of them and that they would drown the black one.

The next morning when Betty awoke, nurse told her to go into her mother's room and look in grandmother's lap and see her two little sisters. Betty looked at them a bit, then asked her grandmother, "Which one are you going to drown?"

K. N.

Junior is in his first school year and is the tallest in his room. One evening I was telling his father about a little girl who was leading the class.

Junior quickly and indignantly said, "Leads the class! Why, I led the class yesterday."

We felt sure this wasn't true, so questioned him and he said innocently, "Yes, I did. I carried the flag and we all marched around the room."

Remove Emphasis from Study in Which the Child Is Failing

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

Sometimes a child and the whole family, too, become "hipped" on the subject of one study with which a child has always had trouble in school. As an example of the sort of situation arithmetic creates in homes:

"My dear Mrs. Bevans: Your article on 'Parents Can Help a Child Overcome Dread of Numbers' was most interesting to me.

"I have a boy, who is nervous. His weak subject seems to be arithmetic and, while I do not wish him to hate the subject, I am most anxious that he get to understand it, as I feel a boy should be a good mathematician. His teachers advised me to try to have him make up his work at summer school and to tutor along with it. He attended summer school from 8:30 to 12 and then tutored from 2 to 3 for six weeks. After that we sent him to the country for a month and two weeks before school opened he tutored in the morning again for an hour.

"He is a great reader, quiet and a great lover of all sorts of athletics.

"We like to spend our evening with the radio, mending or reading, or in playing with the children and not pounding studies into them."

Almost the only help this mother and the thousands like her can give their children must come through their attitude toward the moot subject, as was suggested in a recent article.

This boy has come to overestimate the importance of arithmetic, even though he may excel in other studies. His ability is always crippled by the thoughts, "I can't do it. I hate it. My marks will be low."

In cases like this one, I should stop all tutoring and special help in arithmetic. I would decidedly not have the boy again take vacation work on the subject. That is to say, I would take the emphasis off the arithmetic.

Undoubtedly much of his general nervousness is due to all this straining over it, covering a period of years, as described in the letter. Regardless of marks, it is important that his anxiety about the subject be removed. He should be made to feel that to fail in arithemtic is not terrible. Many people have failed and have been successful in other studies, and in their later careers. In fact, as we all know, many outstanding people were failures at school, and we can keep that in our minds, even if we don't say it.

When the strain is gone this boy will be happier and healthier. And eventually he will probably improve in the hated subject just because he has had a let up, though I would not pin my hopes on that, even for a moment.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., May 24.—[Special.]—President and Mrs. Hoover and their week-end guests returned this evening to the White House from their camp on the Rapidan. Mrs. Hoover and her house guest, Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Jr., went to the camp on Friday preceding the main party.

The secretary of state and Mrs. Stimson, the attorney general and Mrs. Mitchell, and the postmaster general were the ranking guests at the memorial service this afternoon in the Washington cathedral. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Mrs. William Howard Taft, widows of Presidents, the Belgian ambassador, M. Paul May, and a number of other ambassadors, were also among the distinguished company in attendance.

Secretary of Commerce Lamont was joined in his Washington home yesterday by his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Saltzman, the latter the former Miss Gertrude Lamont. Mrs. Lamont, who is still in New York, will not return here for a few days.

The secretary of the interior and Mrs. Wilbur returned yesterday from a week's absence in Boston and New York, where the secretary went to make several public addresses.

The secretary of war and Mrs. Hurley were entertained at dinner last evening by Brig. Gen. and Mrs. James F. McKinley at the Army and Navy Country club.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Blake Dewey Jr. and their infant son have returned to join Mr. Dewey's parents at the Mayflower, where his mother is still very ill.

PATTERNS BY CLOTILDE

[Registered U. S. Patent Office.]

WOMAN'S OR MISS' DRESS.

This pretty dress has plenty of style and youthfulness, and it is easy to make. The cape takes the place of short sleeves, the smooth fitting hipline and the graceful flaring skirt with a narrow belt worn at the normal waistline complete it. A printed red and white silk crêpe or a light navy blue crêpe, with two bindings edging the cape—one in red and one in white—with a shiny red leather belt, will either one be stunning.

The pattern, 3105, comes in sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20 years, and 36 and 38 inches bust measure. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards of 39 inch material with 2½ yards of edging.

Summer Coiffures Short and Curly

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Summer hair, like summer frocks, is growing shorter, but like summer frocks, it is doing it with sane moderation; knees and necks are still modestly veiled, though birds' nests and trains are definitely barred.

The latest coiffures are brushed close to the head, bursting into waves and curls toward the ends. And speaking of waves, Moses talking to the Red sea had nothing on the Paris coiffeurs, for on the parting depends the success or failure of modern hair dressing.

The coiffure shown at the top of our drawing was designed by Robert Graudé to wear with the new uplifted hats that show such a lot of hair on one side. It has a diagonal parting running from near the left temple down to behind the right ear. Most of the hair is brushed toward the right. It is flatly waved and laid in flat curls at the ends.

In the center is a left side parted coiffure that accentuates the difference in length between the front and back hair, quite noticeable in this profile view. So many of the new hats feature the profile, you know. This style of hairdressing gives somewhat the effect of the chignon, without the extra length demanded by the appendage, which is disappearing from smart Parisian heads.

The hair rolls away from the center part in two large flat waves and the ends are curled up [never under]. In back the hair is shingled in a long point.

Food Talk.

Mrs. K. D. writes: "Is it possible to make good biscuits with bread flour? Can you give me a recipe in which I can use soda and buttermilk? In this little town where we live it is impossible to get soft wheat flour."

One can make excellent biscuits from bread flour and with soda and buttermilk. And the quality of these biscuits can be such that any southerner will not spurn them in the least. It requires more milk and a little more fat for bread flour than it does for either general purpose or soft wheat flour. And any kind of flour always requires more buttermilk than sweet milk.

For each two cups of bread flour I use ¾ teaspoon of salt, ½ teaspoon of soda, and 1 teaspoon of baking powder. The flour should be sifted before it is measured and then it should be lifted lightly into the cup and leveled off. Add the salt, baking powder, and the soda to the measured flour and sift twice to thoroughly distribute the soda.

Then the fat may be worked in with the tips of the fingers or cut in with two knives until the appearance is like coarse corn meal. My preference is to work the fat in with the fingers. It is quicker and more efficient. Of course, one must work quickly or the fat will melt and form an oily mass. From three to four tablespoons of lard or hydrogenated fat is sufficient. A biscuit that is tender enough to please me contains only three tablespoons of fat.

Then the buttermilk should be stirred in thoroughly and quickly, with a fork. About 1 cup and 2 tablespoons of this thick milk is required. Turn the soft dough out on a floured board or a floured piece of wax paper and knead the dough for at least a minute. Do not be afraid that you will spoil the biscuits. Have on the board only the necessary flour for kneading. Kneading makes the biscuit flaky. Pat the dough out lightly with a slightly floured hand to a thickness of about 2-3 of an inch and cut with a biscuit cutter.

Place on a slightly oiled shallow pan and bake in a hot oven [450 degrees F.] to a rich golden brown. Biscuits should not stand after they are once made for more than 15 or 20 minutes before they are baked if they are to be of the highest quality. I like to get them in the oven soon after they go in the pan. Serve biscuits very hot. If they happen to get cold reheat them.

One can soften hard wheat flour by adding cornstarch. The resulting mixture will give practically the same results as soft wheat flour. To do this remove 1-3 of a cup from the two cups of measured flour and replace it with that much cornstarch. With this combination a little less milk is needed. Only about one cup will be required. All the other proportions of ingredients may remain the same as those which have been given for the bread flour biscuit recipe.

Now Brush Away That Ugly Yellow and Stain

Teeth 3 Shades Whiter in 3 Days

Now there's absolutely no excuse for stained, yellow, discolored or decayed teeth or sore, spongy gums. For science has discovered a way to destroy millions of germs that swarm into the mouth with every breath and attack teeth and gums. It's the way to make teeth gleaming white. It's called the Kolynos Dry-Brush Technique.

Start using this technique—a half-inch of Kolynos on a dry brush. Overnight you'll note an improvement. In just 3 days your teeth will look whiter—fully 3 shades whiter. Gums will feel firmer and look healthier. Breath and taste will be clean and sweet.

Kolynos is unique.

The very moment it enters the mouth this highly concentrated dental cream becomes a refreshing FOAM which permits the use of a dry brush, thus making Kolynos 10 times more effective.

This penetrating FOAM gets into and cleans out every tiny pit, fissure and crevice. Kills millions of destructive mouth-germs, 190 million in the first 15 seconds. Erases tartar and stimulates the gums.

THUS TEETH ARE QUICKLY AND EASILY CLEANED AS THEY SHOULD BE CLEANED—RIGHT DOWN TO THE BEAUTIFUL NAKED WHITE ENAMEL WITHOUT INJURY.

Now if you want sound, dazzling white teeth and firm, coral-pink gums start using the Kolynos Dry-Brush Technique. Buy a tube of Kolynos.

CUBS LOSE TO PIRATES, 10-7; DROP TO FIFTH

WASHINGTON PARK OPENS 30 DAY RACE MEET TODAY

FAVOR DON LEON, KENTUCKY COLT, IN INAUGURAL

2,000 Horses, Star Riders on Scene.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Turf followers from all parts of the country had gathered in Chicago last night and were awaiting the opening of the Washington Park racing season, which takes place at fifteen minutes after 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The event, which may number upwards of 20,000 when it assembles at the Homewood course, will witness a year ending day battle in the $5,000 Washington Park handicap, a dash at a mile and a furlong. Eighteen were named tonight for the sprint, including some of the fastest sprinters in the country.

When the Kentuckians were rubbing shoes last night with the Marylanders, the Chicagoans, the Californians and others here for the Washington Park opening, it looked like St. Leo, brilliant 3 year old owned by R. W. Collins, likely would be the post time favorite. He was quoted at 4 to 1.

Brave Wisdom's Back.

Brave Wisdom, owned by the Knight brothers of Illinois, and the pair of Justinian and Red Russia, each will represent the Greentree stable, also had many followers. There was considerable support for the Three D's entry of Pansy Welker and Snowdrift and for Cayuga.

All day yesterday the thoroughbreds were marching into Washington Park as the arrivals were so heavy that Track Superintendent Tom Young announced that all the performers for Washington Park's big show were on hand except a few which had filled engagements Saturday at Churchill Downs, where the season ended.

With a lightning fast track promised for the opening, it is expected that 15 or 16 of those named in the twelve entries for the opening race will go the post. There are sure to be surprises in the crowd and the track record may be endangered.

The Washington Park opening marks the beginning of metropolitan racing in Chicago, where the season continues for more than five months.

Brings 23d American Derby.

Washington Park's season brings the 23d revival of the American Derby on June 20, and it promises to be one of the great three year old races of the year. It also will bring revivals of other stake events.

Washington Park is the only track opening in the middle west for the first few weeks and horses have arrived in such numbers at Homewood that it has perplexed even Col. Matt Winn, executive director, and General Manager C. W. Hay as to how to care for them. About 1,100 were quartered at Washington Park late yesterday. Some 800 were at Lincoln Fields. Two hundred more are expected to arrive today and tomorrow, so there will be close to 2,000 stalls available for the meeting.

Among the jockeys to put in an appearance at Washington Park yesterday and who will go into action this afternoon were Eugene James, Don Meade, Charley Corbett, Jimmy Smith, E. Neal, Willie Garner, Heinie Beard, C. Callahan, Steve O'Donnell, Leroy McDermott, G. Elston, R. Barker, Frank Chiavetta, Earl Pool, and Bob Finnerty.

Spence, Goose Happy.

Among the trainers who arrived today couldn't find two in better humor than Ray Spence, who handles the Greentree horses, and Roscoe Goose, who trains for several Kentucky owners. Spence left Louisville for Chicago soon after he saddled Gallant Knight, the winner in the Kentucky Memorial handicap on Derby day. "He's the greatest horse in the country," Spence said when Gallant Knight's name was mentioned. Gallant Knight is due at Washington Park today. Goose has Mahmoud's Glory, a year old which he developed into a sensation in Kentucky during the last few days at his command. Scotland's Glory is owned by C. W. Hay, Washington Park general manager, and he may be sent for the Belmont stakes later to run in the American Derby.

Entered up the Washington Park program on today's opening program are nine other allowance races. Both are restricted for 2 year olds. The first, for 2 year old fillies, is called the Dorothy purse and the other is the Island purse for both colts and fillies. Adobe Post, owned by Mrs. Harris of Chicago, which won at Churchill Downs on Derby day, is scheduled to go in the Blue Island.

U.S. NET TEAM BEATS CANADA, 4-1

MONTREAL, Que., May 24.—(AP)—The United States Davis cup tennis team captured the North American zone title today, eliminating Canada in the final round, four matches to one.

Ellsworth B. Wood Jr. of New York, the unexpected defeat by Marcel Rainville had given Canada its one point on Thursday, clinched the title definitely in the opening singles match today when he upset Dr. Jack Wilson, Montreal veteran, in straight sets, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4. With nothing at stake, Frank Shields, lanky New York star, then romped through Rainville in the final match of the series, 6-0, 6-0.

BATTALINO IS SO WRONG THAT HE'S ALMOST PERFECT

Champion Vindicates Self in La Barba Fight.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 24.—To give the little devil his due, which is a long time overdue, this Bat Battalino, the featherweight champion from Hartford, Conn., dominates his class as no other champion does in the prizefight business. Twice in the last few months he has come down to New York, attended by his following of hometown rooters, an old fashioned claque, who bet their wages on him at the advantageous market price, and licked two of the most stylish featherweights of his time, Kid Chocolate and Fidel La Barba.

It is all very puzzling. Battalino doesn't fight right. Benny Leonard, a venerable old master of about 36 years, sat in the press row last Friday night, he being an old former vicarious journalist himself, rendered erstwhile by the demise of the New York World, and writhed himself almost inside out as he watched Battalino advance constantly against La Barba, flatfooted and with both hands swinging at the level of his hips, to outpunch the bright young collegian through all but four of the fifteen rounds. He provided no coverage for his jaw, but depended on a bobbing style of escape and made it work, and the only conclusion was that Bat Battalino was so terribly bad that he was very good.

Recalls Routis Bout.

The general prejudice against Battalino arose from the fact that the fight in which he won the championship from Andre Routis, the Frenchman, was one of those things best described as one of those things. Routis was not much good and the boys who operated him as a pugilistic property realizing this, managed him with great care until they reckoned that he had paid all the dividends he could be made to pay on their original investment.

Then they took him up to Connecticut one night and let him go against Battalino, who up to that time was a Mr. Nobody of Nowhere-at-all, in a bout under championship conditions.

Among the principal stockholders in the Routis property when the athletes entered the ring that evening was Mr. Pete [Hot-Foot] Riley, a mischievous character who has no illusions whatever about the purpose of pugilism or the sanctity of championships and when the contest was over Mr. Riley, with the bland innocence of the salobnkeeper who won his own turkey raffle, announced that he had acquired, for cash and stamps, the entire rights to the property known as Bat Battalino, now featherweight champion of the world.

This kicked up a bit of a scandal but in a business almost as scandalous as politics, no one outrage can be expected to hold attention for more than ten days, so the matter was not pressed, and after a short time Battalino came to be accepted as the official featherweight champion, with a certain mental tongue-in-cheek reservation.

Lists Cheese Champs.

That is to say, he was held in about the same respect that Giovanni Panica, better known as Johnny [Slot Machine] Wilson, and Al McCoy, enjoyed as middleweight champions, and Jimmy Goodrich enjoyed as lightweight champion, and Tommy Burnes as heavyweight champion. He was another cheese champion, to be endured until such time as he inadvertently accepted a championship bout with some fairly good preliminary boy and was licked.

Many commonplace fighters have beaten Battalino since he won or, let us say, acquired the title, but always in fights that were ordinary pot-boilers under weight stipulations that withheld his title from competition. These beatings confirmed the impression of lower mediocrity and naturally when the boy came down to New York

GOING UP FOR ONE

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Irish Football Team Defeats Chicago, 17-3

The championship Gaelic football team from Kerry county, Ireland, defeated a team of fifteen players chosen from six clubs of the Midwest Gaelic Athletic association yesterday, 17 to 3. Fifteen thousand spectators sat in the stands of Soldiers' field to watch the visitors take their second American victory.

Capt. John Joseph Sheehy, who is a professor at St. Mary's university of Ireland when not playing football, and hailed as the greatest player to leave Ireland's shores, again took the individual honors by scoring six of his team's points. He scored a three point kick immediately after the first half opened and followed with a one point shot.

Score in 2d Half.

The Chicago squad did not score until midway in the second half. John Stenson, forward, booted the ball into the net for the Chicagoan's only point. Penalties gave the Chicago team several opportunities to score in the final half, but the kicks were wide.

After Sheehy's two kicks in the first ten minutes of play Dan Ryan shot the ball between the uprights for a point goal and Ireland took a lead of 5 to 0 as the half ended. Donellan, Chicago forward, was fouled and his kick from the 20 yard line went wide.

The work of the Chicago goalkeeper, Bob Moriarty, stopped several goals as the Irish squad began to pile up points a few minutes after the intermission. O'Keefe received the ball on the Chicago five yard line and scored a three point goal.

A few minutes later Sheehy again scored after running down the field and kicking from the 25 yard line. The players battled near the Chicago goal and Ryan took the ball and scored to give Ireland another one point goal.

Stenson Drives In Goal.

Fitzgerald fouled Stenson and the Chicago forward's kick went past Goalkeeper Riordan. Stenson again was given a penalty kick from the 20 yard line, but failed. Goals were made by O'Keefe and Ryan as the game concluded.

In a preliminary game a south side hurling team defeated the west side, 4 to 2. Exhibition drills by Woodlawn post No. 175 of the American Legion and the drum and bugle corps of Boy Scout troop No. 12 were held before the game.

LAWLESS FIGHTS JONES FOR BOUT WITH M'LARNIN

Meet for 7th Time at Stadium Tonight.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Bucky Lawless, who meets Gorilla Jones in one of the ten round fights tonight at the Stadium, will cast the vote which will determine if the west side sports palace closes shop for the summer after tonight, or if a June production will be scheduled. Nate Lewis, matchmaker, entertainer and raconteur, is authority for the disclosure that the decision rests with the surprisingly efficient Irish boxer from Auburn, N. Y., who recently whipped Young Jack Thompson, welterweight champion.

According to Mr. Lewis, if Lawless whips the Akron gorilla he will have an opportunity to fight Jimmy McLarnin—Pop Foster, McLarnin's manager, being willing. And Foster has given verbal assent, so Lewis is willing to spend carfare to New York on the supposition that, arriving with contract in hand, Foster will sign.

This Is a Better Show.

The bouts tonight also are designed to test whether the Chicago public wants to see a program of boxers, none of whom boast a ring title above that of a city ward. This show, as was the Thompson-Lawless battle, is referred to customarily as popular priced.

Tonight's program, at that, rates ahead of the Jack Thompson performance, for the Negro champion, having just regained his championship, seemed to indulge in his royal right to campaign for easy money with his honors safeguarded by enforcement of the demand that his opponent fight over the 147 pound limit.

Gorilla Jones is fighting for the first time in Chicago. Much ado has been made over his ferocious attack which, combined with a more or less even division in six previous fights with Lawless, is the advertising material. Tonight's ten rounder may be regarded as final effort of each to prove superiority.

Lawless Holds 3 Decisions.

Lawless has won three decisions over Jones, so his manager said the other night with a nod of acquiescence from Lewis, lost one decision in Erie, Pa., was awarded a draw, and was knocked out in another. The lost decision in Erie, Pa., was waved aside by an inflection of the voice which intimated that Erie, Pa., was one of those localities where Lawless might expect to lose no matter what he did in way of mayhem.

With this disposition of defeat, and with Nate Lewis again in agreement, Lawless' manager offered the belief the Gorilla would run second tonight.

The correlative report from the training quarters of Jones is that Lawless doesn't have a chance.

Miller Meets Delmont.

Ray Miller and Danny Delmont, a couple of Chicago boys in the 122 pound division, also are scheduled for ten rounds tonight. Neither has acquired especial honor in the home town, although Miller has gone here and there with varying success.

Delmont has been a steady working fellow, quite popular with neighborhood promoters, because he always has been willing to absorb every blow which came his way without retreat.

Each of the three preliminary bouts tonight presents a youngster who some time is expected to be a title contender. The eight round lightweight clasff between Wesley Ramey and Johnny Jadick goes double, for Jadick holds two victories over King Tut, while Ramey now is alleged to be about where Sammy Mandell was when campaigning around Chicago shortly before he whaled Rocky Kansas for the title.

The preliminary bout, Hymie Wiseman, from Des Moines, Ia., and Midget Mike O'Dowd, is planned for six rounds. Wiseman surprised Chicagoans a few weeks ago by his efficient work against Paul Dazzo, née Leberto, of the 1930 Golden Gloves team.

Lyons and Caraway Stop Indians; Sox Win Two, 4-2, 3-2

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., May 24.—Everybody else in the league has been batting the Indians around, so the White Sox decided to get their share of the gravy this afternoon. They got it not only by taking the front end but also the night cap of the double header before 25,341 paid customers, who probably came out to satisfy their curiosity as to what actually ails the team which a few short weeks ago was dominating the percentage column. The scores of the happy hours of labor were 4 to 3 and 3 to 2.

Pitching of class was responsible for both victories. In one the skilled Ted Lyons, pitted against Clint Brown, proved he can no longer be classed among the cripples. Ted not only pitched but also furnished the hit that brought on half of the Sox run total. After Lyons had completed his day's work Pat Caraway came forth and after a wabbly start throttled the Tribe on five hits.

Blue Gets 3 Hits.

Some of the success registered by Lyons and Caraway can be attributed to the Chicago defense, which of late has been shaky. Lyons derived his greatest assistance from the second base combination of Bill Cissell and Lew Fonseca. Between them they handled 24 fielding chances. In the second game it was mainly an all around airtight defense, with Blue the most spectacular, that kept Caraway out in front after his mates had provided a lead over Fay Thomas in the first couple of innings.

Mr. Blue also assumed some of the responsibility for getting runs over the plate. In the first affair he was denied entrance to first base. The hitting was properly attended to, however, by Reynolds, Fonseca, Cissell, Jefferies, and Lyons. Then to compensate himself for what he didn't do in the opening game, Blue delivered three hits in the nightcap. Two of these, coming in the first and second innings, figured in all the runs scored by the visitors. His other hit was a liner against the wall in right in the ninth, but he tried to stretch it to a double and was put out.

Hose Score Early.

Nothing of consequence happened to Lyons in the first game while the Sox were accumulating a 2 to 0 lead. One of those two runs seeped over in the opening inning. After two were out Reynolds, who has been hitting in hard luck, got a break when his tall fly to center fell for a double. Fonseca promptly scored him with a single. The other run began in the third when Brown walked Watwood. Reynolds flied out and Fonseca laid down a sacrifice bunt. Fothergill then supplied a single, on which Watwood hurried home.

Anyhow, Mr. Tonn Captured a Title—Champion Eater

BY ARCH WARD.

Before the Golden Gloves season of 1931 is forgotten it may be well to pay tribute to a young man who won a championship but received little credit and no publicity for his achievement.

His name is Merrill Tonn, a German heavyweight who reached the semi-finals of the toughest competition amateur boxing provides. You didn't hear about Tonn when the champions of America were whipping the boys from France, because he wasn't on the team. You didn't read much about his exploits in intercity competition because he was only an alternate on the Chicago squad.

But he was the greatest eater the 1931 tournament developed. When it comes to putting away food Tonn is no amateur. Maybe that is the reason Coaches Yanger, Behr, and Young kept him off the international team. They are far sighted gentlemen and wanted no unpleasant aftermath.

Nick Scialaba came into THE TRIBUNE meet with something of a reputation as a robust eater. He was reported to have devoured an entire ox at one sitting. The first crack he made after polishing off Henri Bruyère of France at Soldiers' field was "When do we eat?" He asked that before he knew the decision.

Adam Smith, the Rockford baker boy who whipped every man he met in the tournament except John Long, a light heavyweight, won wide acclaim the first night the team was in training at the Illinois Athletic club by eating two baked chickens without serious pause.

But after breakfast next morning it was apparent that neither Mr. Scialaba nor Mr. Smith was to be mentioned in the same breath with Mr. Tonn. It is claimed for Mr. Tonn that he disposed of twelve hard boiled eggs in less time than it takes to fight one round.

It is worthy of comment that Mr. Tonn didn't take time to peel the hard boiled eggs. He ate shells and all.

This kind of genius will not long go unrecognized. You will hear more about Merrill Tonn in the 1932 meet.

TUG WILSON'S PROBLEM.

Kenneth L. Wilson, who directs athletics at Northwestern university, is considering an increase in the price of tickets for the football game with Notre Dame at Soldiers' field next October. He wants to boost the fee from $3 to $4, but fears the fans will stay away in large numbers if he does.

This game was scheduled for Notre Dame, but was transferred to Chicago after the Big Ten faculty representatives refused to sanction the proposal to move the 1930 game from Evanston to Soldiers' field. The reason for desiring the changed site was to relieve distress among the unemployed. Proceeds in excess of what would have been taken in at Dyche stadium would have gone to charity.

It seems to me that Mr. Wilson lacks confidence in the popularity of his attraction. More than 120,000 paid $4 apiece to watch Notre Dame play Southern California on the lake front in 1929. Nearly that many paid the same amount to sit in the rain while the Irish waded through the Army last November.

And who is Mr. Wilson to say that a Notre Dame-California or Notre Dame-Army game has more pulling power in Chicago than the annual battle between Notre Dame and Northwestern?

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Our Cubs plunked into fifth place yesterday afternoon as they took their second licking of the series from the Pittsburgh Pirates, 10 to 7. The Chicagoans landed at the top of the second division, though sixth place was about to engulf them when the Robins rose up against Philadelphia and staved off a defeat that would have placed the Phillies in fifth place ahead of the Cubs.

The Pirates had the pleasure of being the first National league team to hang up as many as ten runs against our lads and it is indeed surprising that they did not make more than 10, for they had 15 men left on bases, all of whom were ready to score with the slightest encouragement. Ten runs and 15 runners left on bases indicate that the Cub pitching wasn't very good—a fact that could be discovered with the naked eye, even if you had no statistics at hand. Root, May, Bush, Teachout, and Blake pitched in the order named and the only one who wasn't soft for the enemy was Blake.

Wilson Warms Bench.

Even though the Cubs were taking their eighth lamming in ten games there was considerable of interest to the 22,000 spectators. In the first place Manager Hornsby finally got around to the threatened business of benching Hack Wilson. Rogers had indicated he had some such idea while in the east, but it is said newspaper friends dissuaded him after certain other newspaper men had made the announcement.

Lester Bell also was out of the lineup because of an injured leg, it was reported. Jurges made his first appearance in a major league starting lineup and had only one chance afield. He handled it beautifully, but Charley Grimm, unaccustomed to rifle shots from third, was unable to hold the throw and got an error for his lapse. The fact that Charley had forgotten about Jurges' arm resulted in the scoring of the Pirates' eighth and ninth runs.

Hornsby Gets Three Hits.

And Mr. Hornsby's willingness to do something to improve the ball nine irrespective of precedents apparently put the wolves in a tough spot. There were many cheers for Rog on each appearance at the plate. The first time up he responded with his No. 7 homer, and the following two times he knocked out singles. He also made several brilliant plays afield. But Hornsby was never a pitcher, and apparently there is a limit to the extent he can carry his ball team on his back. This fact has been especially noted for the last two weeks now.

Hornsby's homer was the first run of the game, but it soon was swallowed up in a brutal second inning attack on Root, an attack which led to Charley's removal after he had been tagged with his fourth defeat in a row. Root was unhappy to leave so soon, and did a sight of pantomiming and glove tossing as he made his way off Mr. Wrigley's acreage.

Comorosky Starts Rout.

The assault on Root was started by Comorosky, who opened the second inning with a single. Suhr and Phillips followed with doubles, Sankey sacrificed and Brame singled. Then Charles went away and May came in. L. Waner hit into a double play to end the inning, and this, incidentally, was the last time the Cubs got L. Waner out, for he singled his next four times at bat.

The score became 4 to 1 in the first of the third when Grantham started things with a single and eventually got around to where he was forced to score when Phillips walked with the bases full. The Cubs got an unearned run in their half of the third on singles by English and Hornsby and an error by Grantham.

The fourth inning marked the demise of May and the temporary ascension of Bush. A single by L. Waner, a walk to Grantham, a double by P. Waner and singles by Traynor and dians to tie the score in the home third were given a certain amount of moral support by Umpire Van Grafian. Porter singled to right and Kamm singled to third, Porter taking third and Kamm going to second on the throw in. Porter scooted home while Fonseca was throwing out Averill. Morgan followed with a grounder to deep short. Cissell pounced on it and turned loose a bullet like peg to first base. Blue had to perform a swan dive to make the catch, and the arbiter decided that Lu had taken his foot from the sack. This gave Morgan a hit and Kamm scored.

Sox Score Two in Eighth.

Two were gone in the eighth before the Chicagoans manufactured the two runs that brought the decision. Cissell bounced a single off Hodapp's right cheek bone. Jeffries drove a two bagger into the overflow folks in the left field corner, Cissell stopping at third. The Indians then proceeded to take a chance on Lyons. Ted ruined the strategy by running the count to 2 and 2, and then whacking a single into center, Cissell and Jeffries scoring with ease.

After the third Lyons surrendered only six more hits, and one of these in the eighth developed into the Tribe's third and last run. The hit bounced off Porter's hat to start the inning. Lyons gave his old buddy, Kamm, a pass. Eventually Porter got around to the plate on two force plays.

Get Good Start Again.

The Sox kept the crowd in bad humor by starting right off with a run in the second game. Singles by Ellis and Watwood and Reynolds' long fly did this. They followed up with two more in the second inning. After Cissell had filed out, Jeffries singled and went to second when Vosmik fumbled the ball. Kamm disposed of Tate and Caraway dumped a single in short left. Although the odds for scoring on the hit were against him, Jeffries dashed for the plate and made it easily when Vosmik threw the ball to the grandstand. Caraway reached third on the error, and Blue's single over first base scored him.

While the Sox were engaged in the production of the above mentioned runs, the Indians were causing Caraway just enough annoyance to bring about runs in the second and third. In the former session Hodapp led off with a bounding single over Caraway and hiked to third on Detore's double in the crowd in left field. Hodapp registered on Sprinz' fly to Fothergill. In the third Porter singled and sprinted down to second on a bad throw to first base by Tate. The next two men accomplished nothing, but Morgan was different. His hit a peculiar single into short right and Porter scored. This made the score 3 to 2.

Boat Race to Boost Travel by Lake Route

The outboard motorboat marathon sponsored by THE TRIBUNE, which will be held Saturday, from Milwaukee to Chicago, not only will develop record speeds, but it also will demonstrate the advantages of travel by Lake Michigan. Chicago and the score of cities located on the lake never have taken complete advantage of the facilities for water travel in the same fashion that New York has.

It is difficult for many to realize the speeds now achieved in these small boats. For an example, a spectator at the start of the marathon in Milwaukee at 8:30 Saturday morning would be unable to drive by automobile to Navy pier in time to watch the finish.

The distance might be done in a high priced car or a racing motor, but the handicap of traffic, the delay in reaching the open road and then in threading Chicago's crowded streets certainly would offer no pleasure in such a trip. In the meantime, without traffic difficulties, these speed boats will come roaring down the north shore and the winners will finish in only a few minutes more than two hours.

Two days remain in which to enter the outboard marathon and the 14 speed races at Navy pier next Sunday. Entries will be accepted if postmarked no later than Wednesday.

GOLF STROKES • RIGHT & WRONG

by Jock Hutchison

One of the most important points of the golf stroke is maintaining a uniform stoop throughout the swing. In addressing the ball it is necessary to lean over slightly, and I have maintained this stoop right to the top of the back swing.

The beginner has straightened up in the course of his back swing and is unable to get the right club position at the top of his stroke. At this point the club should be pointing along the line of flight. Straightening spoils the body pivot.

AMELIA EARHART finds new thrills in her smart new air-cooled FRANKLIN

So great has been the progress of air-cooling in the past few years, and so superior is its performance, that automobile authorities are asking, "Is water-cooling in motor cars doomed?"

The autogiro—latest development of aviation—employs air-cooling. Amelia Earhart, who holds important speed records for women and who has recently purchased an autogiro, has also purchased an air-cooled Franklin. She says, "The smooth, glider-like action of my Franklin in flight is most pleasant. Even after a long drive I feel no fatigue. It handles beautifully and surely. The zooming response of the air-cooled airplane-type engine is always thrilling."

What Miss Earhart describes in her car is the airplane feel of all Franklin cars. This modern and thrilling motoring is a direct result of air-cooling engineering. You are particularly invited to see our special spring display of smart De Luxe Franklin models—then to drive the car. Remember, with Franklin's new low level of prices, beginning at $2295 at the factory, the fine quality and the new, more convenient terms, it is easier to own a Franklin now than many lesser quality cars.

JOLIET GOLFER'S 149 WINS DERBY AT MIDLOTHIAN

BY HOWARD BARRY.

A dark horse galloped home ahead of the field in the 27th annual Midlothian Golf Derby, which began Saturday and ended yesterday. C. V. Lauer of Joliet, competing for the first time in this event, took the lead in the final round and won breezing with a score of 177—28—149 for 36 holes, beating William Kerr of Midlothian, a former University of Chicago cheer leader, by a margin of three strokes.

When the first players stepped to the tee at the start of yesterday's competition strong shifting winds, which were whipping the flags and making the clubhouse awnings snap like firecrackers, gave them a forecast of the difficulties which lay before them along the eighteen undulating fairways. Before the day was over those erratic gusts had carried so many carefully planned shots into the rough, that only one player—Chick Evans of Edgewater—was able to break 80. He came home with a 77, duplicating his Saturday score.

Low net, Saturday—William J. Holiday, Midlothian, 78—7—71; Joe B. Creevy, Midlothian, 81—9—72, second.

Low net, Sunday—G. H. Abott, Briersate, 92—16—76.

Low gross, Sunday—Chick Evans, 39—38—77.

Low net foursome, Saturday—A. B. Sweet 74—2—72; Clair Maxwell, 84—6—78; Ray Maxwell, 79—5—74; Lloyd Maxwell, 91—14—77. Total, 301.

Battalino's Style So Bad It's Very Good

last winter to defend the title for the first time against Chocolate, a fast little boxer and fairly firm hitter, it was presumed that the championship was about to be taken out of pawn again.

Possibly, if Chocolate had won that night, Mr. Riley would have announced with the official reading of the decision that he had taken over the Chocolate property; but the question didn't arise, for Battalino won the scrap, and the best that any one could do in the way of an answer to the puzzle was a theory that Chocolate had been fought to exhaustion at an immature age.

Bat at a Disadvantage.

There was no such notion to calm the confusion of the trade last Friday evening, for La Barba was strong and well covered with meat at his natural weight, while Battalino, after hard training, was pale and stringy, all the little muscles and the vertebrae showing boldly beneath the tight drawn hide in every gesture under the lights. Yet it was La Barba who sagged into clinches throughout the fight, to avoid the question that Battalino was always raising, and La Barba who faded from fatigue toward the end as Battalino kept on walking in with his wide legged stance, soliciting trouble with his exposed chin and winning his fight from the young man who was supposed to be the best featherweight in the world.

Battalino fights like Al [Foot-in-the-Bucket] Simmons of the Athletics hits the baseball, and Mr. Simmons is so wrong that he's absolutely right.

Maroons in Sight of Big Ten Baseball Title—Here's Why

If the University of Chicago wins a conference baseball championship in the first year of Pat Page's return as a Maroon coach he will give most of the credit to the iron man performance of Roy Henshaw, 19 year old sophomore southpaw. On two consecutive Saturdays the Midway pitching ace has hurled eighteen full innings to win both ends of double headers.

A double victory over Indiana at Bloomington Saturday put the Maroons into a tie with Illinois for first place, with only two more games to play. A similar dual win over Minnesota at the Midway the previous Saturday jumped the Maroons from fourth to second place.

ROY HENSHAW.

First Time in Conference.

Henshaw's feat has never been duplicated in conference competition, according to Page. In the four games he has allowed seven runs and nineteen hits and struck out forty-five batters. He is credited with all eight Maroon victories and charged with one of the two defeats. In the opening game of the season he was beaten by Mills of the Illini, 4 to 2.

The victories over Indiana Saturday were particularly welcome to Page, since he coached the Crimson squad last year. Lefty Veller, who had one of the best hurling records in the conference last year, attempted to emulate Henshaw's performance Saturday, when he started the second game after dropping the first, 3-2, but was withdrawn after three innings, and the Maroons won again by the same score.

Ohio St.	4	2	.667	Purdue	0	5	.000
Wisconsin	4	3	.571	Iowa	0	5	.000

Averages Four Hits Game.

During the season Henshaw has allowed an average of four hits a game while striking out an average of better than eleven opposing batsmen. His best game was a one hit victory in the second contest of the double-header with Minnesota. His batting average is .321.

Henshaw's biggest asset is his underhand delivery, coupled with remarkable control, a good curve, and a fair fast ball, according to Page.

"The boy is still green, with a lot to learn, but he has plenty of promise," Page said yesterday. "He'll improve, but he'll have to improve a lot to be as good as Owen Carroll was at Holy Cross or Ted Lyons at Baylor or George Sisler at Michigan. For one thing he's pretty light."

Made Trip to Japan.

Henshaw weighs only 144, but has a stocky build. He is a product of Bowen High school. He was taken on the Japan trip with the Maroons last summer, but proved ineffective against the Japanese collegians.

To be assured of a share of the championship the Maroons must defeat Indiana at the Midway Friday and Wisconsin at Madison June 6.

Scientists Study Deposits in Minnesota.

Minneapolis, May 24.—(AP)—Beginning of development of a future source of steel was announced tonight at the University of Minnesota.

This source is an estimated billion tons of low grade ores in the Mesabe range, which is yielding already the richest store of the nation's high grade ores at the rate of 30,000,000 to 40,000,000 tons annually. Low grade ore is mineral having less than 40 to 45 per cent of iron content, and mostly untapped for steel making.

Plan to Analyze It.

Plans for analyzing this Mesabe low grade reserve were made public by E. W. Davis, superintendent of the mines experiment station at the university, and Dean W. R. Appleby of the school of mines and metallurgy. The amount of low grade will be measured and mapped and its types classified.

Some of these ores are magnetite, requiring magnetic separation, some can be brought to higher grade simply by washing, others require crushing or roasting, while some depart in different ways from present shipping standards.

"The mining companies have data," said Mr. Davis, "that should make it possible for us to make a very thorough analysis of the deposits, and on the basis of this show what the future of the industry is to be, and also what types of equipment should be developed so that the future can be assured.

More Shipped Each Year.

"There is no question that northern Minnesota holds tremendous deposits of these lower grade ores, most of them not available for shipment under present extractive methods, year by year, however, more relatively low grade ore is being shipped after being brought up to standard by having some of the very highest grade mixed with it. For about eight years past the percentage of treated ore included in annual Minnesota shipments has risen steadily.

Seven thousand dollars a year for two years has been set aside for low grade ore research.

RACKET BUREAU WILL PROSECUTE 2 OF ITS AGENTS

Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller said yesterday that additional charges of carrying a revolver may be made against two investigators from his office, Michael B. Tenner and Jacob Greeneman, who were arrested Saturday night on charges of attempted extortion. Their work had nothing to do with investigating beer flats or suspected speakeasies, and they were not authorized to carry guns except when told to do so during raids, Mueller said.

The investigators were arrested by federal prohibition agents upon complaint of Emil Fornero, 3337 Lake Park avenue. They had seized a bottle of liquor in Fornero's place and had announced they would return Saturday evening for the money they demanded not to prosecute, according to Fornero, who notified the prohibition office. Federal agents were sent to Fornero's place, where they concealed themselves. They said they heard the investigators again demand money.

Prosecutor Mueller, who is in charge of the racket bureau of the state's attorney's office, said he probably would take the investigators into the felony court today and would seek their indictment. He will handle this prosecution himself, he said.

$9,028 POLICIES FOUND IN INQUIRY ON MEYERS DEATH

Assistant State's Attorney E. A. Ferrari yesterday was furnished records from the John Hancock Mutual Insurance company showing that Mrs. Margaret Summers of 632 West North avenue, held in connection with the death of her nephew, Thomas Meyers, 17 years old, was the beneficiary in nineteen small policies issued on the lives of ten persons. Five of the insured have died.

The total amount of all the policies was $9,028. On the life of young Meyers there were six policies for a total of $2,604. The last one was issued on Dec. 31, 1930. Another policy in Mrs Summers' favor was on her husband, Thomas Summers, whose body has been exhumed in the inquiry. She also collected on the deaths of three peddlers who lived in her home.

Those still living and insured are Robert Baker, Mrs. Margaret Ritty, Marie and Margaret Ritty Jr., each for $500.

An examination of the vital organs of the Meyers boy by the coroner's chemist probably will be complete today.

COMRADES HONOR SOLDIER DEAD OF ALL U. S. WARS

Flags and Flowers Are Placed on Graves.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

Veterans of all American wars turned aside yesterday from the ebb and flow of every day activities to walk again down memory's paths in their annual pilgrimage to the last resting places of their former comrades. At twilight last night small flags fluttered in the breezes above the graves of all soldier dead in Chicago cemeteries in observance of the approaching Memorial day.

Taps Break Silence.

More than that, flowers spread their perfume like a benediction on the grassy mounds that covered each fallen hero, in the congested areas as well as in the loneliest corners of these "eternal cities." All day the accustomed hush of the cemeteries had been broken by the tread of marching feet, the rattle of musketry, the murmur of voices in prayer, and the far, solemn echoes of buglers sounding "taps."

Around the recent grave of the venerable Gen. James E. Stuart in Forest Home cemetery his comrades of the civil, Spanish, and world war gathered to extend to him the honors he had so often directed for others during his long lifetime. Memorial services were under the auspices of Chicago camp No. 54 of the United Spanish-American War Veterans.

Judge Joseph Burke was chairman of the annual pilgrimage of the Blackhawk post, American Legion, to the graves of its former members in Rosehill, Calvary, Montrose, Mount Olive and other cemeteries.

Many Groups in Parade.

Numerous organizations participated in a parade and memorial service on the west side, focusing at the Doughboy monument at Hamlin avenue and Madison street. Forges post of the American Legion, the Veterans' corps of the 132d infantry, Illinois National Guard, and the 33d division post 1871 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars marched in the procession, of which Gen. John J. Garrity was honorary marshal, Philip H. Garrard grand marshal, and Philip T. Duff adjutant.

Services in many churches commemorated the sacrifices of the men who died for their country.

Commemorative services were held also yesterday at the grave of Lieut. Frank A. Koljane in Evergreen cemetery under the joint auspices of the Hamel association and the Combat Medal Men, of which he had been a past commander.

MRS. J. T. STONE TAKEN BY DEATH ON TORONTO VISIT

Mrs. Bessie Parsons Stone, wife of Dr. John Timothy Stone, president of the Presbyterian Theological seminary and pastor emeritus of the Fourth Presbyterian church, died yesterday at the home of her sisters, Miss Emma and Miss Jessie Parsons, in Toronto, Ont., where she had been visiting. Besides her husband, Mrs. Stone is survived by a brother, Harry L. Parsons of Des Moines, and by three daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Bruner, Mrs. Margaret Evans, and Miss Katharine Stone.

Mrs. Stone was a native of Toronto. She was married to Dr. Stone in 1895.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Fourth Presbyterian church, of which Dr. Stone was pastor for 21 years. The Stone residence is at 25 East Delaware place.

Former Mayor Fuller of Grand Rapids Is Dead

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 24.—[Special.]—Philo C. Fuller, 75, former mayor and lumberman, died at his home here today. Mr. Fuller was born in New York state and had resided in this city 66 years. His grandfather, Philo Case Fuller, was twice elected to congress from his New York district and after moving to Michigan became president of the Erie and Kalamazoo railroad and later ran for governor on the Whig ticket.

"Brushes Hair Grayness Goes"

Helen Ray

THANKS to Kolor-Bak, no one need endure the handicaps of gray hair. All you need to do to rid yourself of grayness is to sprinkle a few drops of Kolor-Bak on your brush for a few days and brush your hair. Kolor-Bak, which you can secure at any drug or department store, is as clear and pleasant to use as water. No stickiness! No muss! Your hair will take on that youth-like naturalness desired. No dull, flat, "telltale" dyed look. No streaks. No possibility that others will suspect you of "touching up" your hair.

VARIED FACTORS BRING ANXIETY TO WHEAT PIT

Uncertainty Rises Regarding Crops.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

The crop scare period for winter wheat in the southwest is on, due largely to freezing temperatures nearly every day the last week in many parts of Kansas and Nebraska. With uncertainty as to continued lack of sufficient subsoil moisture in the American and Canadian spring wheat belt in the northwest, wheat traders have plenty of uncertainty as to the crop outlook.

Coupled with that is the uneasiness as to what the farm board will do with its 280,000,000 bu or more cash wheat on hand when it withdraws from the market at the end of June, as announced by Chairman J. C. Stone within the last few days. Previous announcements were that the farm board subsidiaries would do nothing to dig crop futures after May 30. Indications are that the farm board will not for liberal quantities of cash wheat this week, as Friday terminates selling in May contracts.

Also Causes Uneasiness.

Even interest in May wheat causes considerable speculative uneasiness. The farm board, however, can easily see to it to get all the 25,000,000 bu represented by open interest at the close on last Friday.

Possibility of a very small crop of spring wheat in the American and Canadian northwest, coupled with a record crop in most European importing countries might make it easy for the American farm board to dispose of part of its holdings through its own and private efforts, but the trade is in doubt as to a development of a demand sufficient to absorb the immense lines held within a year, regardless of prices. Farm board officials, however, appear to be confident that eventually there will be a call for their holdings.

A move was given the trade late in the week owing to prevalence of heating temperatures over a large area in Kansas and Nebraska, but also particularly in Kansas—in the last few days are said to have made new buffalo of wheat than were likely to be lost by freezing weather. This invariably gives the trade a cop once annually, and the future will be watched with unusual interest.

Survey on Crop Changes.

W. C. Murray, crop statistician for Conant, Curtiss & Co., in close touch with southwestern crop conditions, summizes his views in the following statement:

"From May 1 to June 1 the condition of winter wheat in the United States normally declines about 8 per cent. This amount of decline is allowed for in making government forecasts. In other words, a condition of 81 per cent on June 1 would forecast about the same number of bushels as the government's May 1 condition of 83. In Kansas the normal decline in condition from May 1 to June 1 is even greater than for the United States as a whole; the ten year average condition in Kansas on May 1 is 81, and June 1 it is 71; this amount of decline is discounted in making the May 1 bushel forecast; therefore, the decline would have to be greater than the ratio before the May 1 bushel forecast is reduced."

In the northwest there is a deficit

Asserts Bankers Differ as to Attitude on Wage Cuts

New York, May 24.—[Special.]—There seems to be a wide public misunderstanding in regard to the attitude of bankers toward the wage problem, states the Guaranty Trust Company of New York in the current issue of the Guaranty Survey.

"The charge is being frequently made 'that powerful banking interests are seeking to force a general reduction in wages,' and, furthermore, that bankers are coöperating to the point of conspiracy to bring about such readjustment,' the Survey continues.

"These statements, or the broad references drawn from them, are not correct. The fact that a few individual bankers have expressed their personal opinions on the wage question, which, as citizens and business men, they have a perfect right to do, does not commit bankers as a whole or as a class to any position on the problem. Bankers differ in their attitude toward the wage problem as toward other economic problems, and the attempt to generalize regarding banking position on this question is not warranted.

No Unity of Opinion.

"The imputation from either political or labor sources that bankers have conferred or combined or conspired in any group manner on this question is not true, there is no such unity of opinion, and there has been absolutely no coöperative effort on their part to force such an issue.

"It is inevitable that in such a situation as exists certain bankers, as well as many other thoughtful and patriotic citizens, should feel that in a period of general economic readjustment the wages of labor might be involved, as well as those of capital. Such matters are controlled by impersonal economic principles and causes which operate regardless of individual opinions or desires. The questions of the economic value of high wages and the economic necessity of lower wages are open to discussion, and upon them bankers differ, as do all other classes.

In discussing the business situation the Survey says: "The situation presents an unusually irregular appearance, with favorable developments in some directions and considerably less encouraging trends in others. As far as the actual level of business activity is concerned, recent reports indicate strong resistance to the seasonal influences now tending to produce contraction. Price movements, on the other hand, have been far from reassuring. Both stock and commodity values have declined to new low levels for the depression, creating doubt in some minds as to whether any sustained improvement in rates of industrial output and trade volumes can be expected as long as such instability exists in the price structure.

Some Lines Improve.

"Although the usual tendency in almost all branches of business at this time of year is toward lower levels of activity, actual increases have recently been reported in a number of very important lines. The index of business activity of the Guaranty Trust company, which makes allowance for seasonal changes, stands at a preliminary figure of 73.8 for April, as against 72.3 for March and 71.7 for February. This movement seems to indicate that the importance of the decline in steel ingot output from the March peak was generally overemphasized. Many business men have formed the habit of basing their opinions as to the course of general business almost wholly on changes in operations at the steel mills. In the present instance this practice proves to have been misleading."

"LONG HOPED FOR UPTREND HERE," BUSH BELIEVES

New York, May 24.—(AP)—Irving T. Bush, president of the Bush Terminal company of New York, said today that the business of the company gives every indication that "the long hoped for uptrend is here."

Gross and net earnings are steadily increasing, he said, in all departments of the company, which houses a large number of manufacturing and distributing firms and agencies within its lofts, owns a railroad which serves terminal tenants, and transports materials to and from its warehouses and piers.

Gross earnings for April showed an increase of 3.3 per cent over March, Mr. Bush said, April carloadings exceeded those of March by 8.1 per cent and power consumption increased in April 10 per cent over March.

"In every department of this company's activities," he added, "the first fifteen days of May show a healthy increase over the preceding month."

State and Municipal Bond Issues for This Week Drop

New York, May 24.—(AP)—New state and municipal bond issues scheduled for award this week total $20,647,913, and represent the needs of 70 communities, compared with $54,641,043 last week and a weekly average of $40,085,880 for the year to date, the Bond Buyer reports. The Lincoln park district of Chicago has called for bids on Tuesday for $3,000,000 4½ per cent improvement bonds. On Wednesday Nassau county, N. Y., will consider bids for $5,000,000 hospital, road, and land purchase obligations with a 3¾ per cent coupon.

WORST BEHIND US AS TRADE GAINS, FARRELL AVERS

New York, May 24.—(AP)—James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel corporation and chairman of the national foreign trade council, expressed a conviction in a radio address tonight that "our worst experiences are behind us and that we are gradually entering upon a period of increasing trade activity."

Mr. Farrell devoted most of his talk to the convention of the national foreign trade 18th convention which opens Wednesday in New York under the auspices of the council.

America's recovery, he said is not entirely dependent upon the solution of problems in other lands.

"We possess within ourselves the power to lead in world trade recovery. This power, to be effective, must be directed to the solution of our domestic situation. If we would aid the world, our efforts must begin at home.

"There is a keen desire among leaders of industry to find a means whereby the effects of violent fluctuations in world trade may be neutralized or mitigated in the future. Time and patience are required in the solution of this problem. Unemployment is an economic condition which is a challenge to the constructive thought of modern times."

CENTRAL PUBLIC SERVICE CO. ASSETS SHOW BIG INCREASE

The extensive acquisitions made by the Central Public Service corporation during 1930 are reflected in the company balance sheet as of Dec. 31 which was issued yesterday with the yearly income statement.

Assets are carried at $364,127,428, as compared with $200,340,680 at the close of the previous year and $94,782,455 at the end of 1928. The two most important additions to the company's system were the Pacific Northwest Public Service, which was acquired in March, and the Southern Public Utility company.

The condensed income account for the year ended Dec. 31 shows net earnings, before interest, retirement, etc., of $18,111,431, as compared with $18,058,765 in 1929. The figures for both years include earnings of the Pacific Northwest Public Service company and the Southern Cities Public Service company, which were acquired in the latter year. Net earnings for 1930 available for retirement, miscellaneous charges and surplus amounted to $5,535,051.

CHAIN GROCERY STORES DO WELL DESPITE SLUMP

Profit Near That of '30; Tonnage Up.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 24.—Chain grocery stores are making the best showing of any retail organizations under the present depression conditions, according to bankers interested in their financing, and they point to the steadily decreasing straddle between sales last year and this year, despite an 18 per cent average decline in the price of commodities they sell.

An analysis of the first four months' sales of the eight largest grocery chains reveals that each month this year they have come closer to equaling the sales of the corresponding month of last year and that in practically all cases their tonnage sales have exceeded those of last year each month.

Cumulative sales of the eight largest grocery stores in April totaled $162,372,457, which is a decrease of but 2.2 per cent from the total for April last year.

April Brings Surprise.

In addition to the decline in commodity prices observers of chain store operation found the April results surprising, as April in 1930 had the full benefit of Easter shopping, where a part of this fell in March this year, and it was anticipated that sales might show a larger decrease from last year than had March. With the sales reports in, however, the 2.2 per cent decrease is the smallest which has been shown this year and continues for the fourth consecutive month the closing of the gap between dollar sales of this year and last. In March the cumulative sales of the eight chains showed a decline of 4.3 per cent, in February a 5.2 per cent decrease and in January a 6.5 per cent decrease.

The eight organizations included in the compilation with a comparison of their April sales are: Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company, $85,160,278, compared with $86,137,293; Kroger Grocery and Baking company, $20,812,012, compared with $20,933,158; Safeway Stores, $17,951,805, compared with $18,325,007; American Stores, $13,728,097, compared with $14,090,912; First National Stores, $8,417,098, compared with $8,690,912; McMarr Stores, Inc., $6,586,666, compared with $7,109,222; National Tea company, $6,405,675, compared with $7,163,605, and Daniel Reeves, Inc., $3,310,826, compared with $3,610,538.

Steady Rise in Patronage.

Some of the increases in dollar sales are accounted for by an increase in the number of stores operated by some of the chains compared with last year, but in the cumulative result this fact is offset by the abandonment of some stores, by organizations represented in the cumulative report. It is accepted by Wall street bankers that the chain grocery stores have shown a steady increase in patronage during the last year as the result of an extensive campaign on the part of each of them to appeal to a buying portion of the public that could not be tempted by mere offerings of lower prices.

Mo-Kan Pipe Line Issues Its Annual Report

The Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line company's annual report covering the twelve months ending March 31, 1931, will be sent to stockholders today. It is revealed by the report that contracts have been entered into for the sale of gas from a 50 per cent owned subsidiary, the Panhandle Eastern pipe line system, to the Illinois Power and Light corporation, the Missouri Power and Light company, the Central Illinois Light company and the Illinois Power company.

The contracts provide for the purchase by these companies of the ultimate gas requirements of distribution systems in Champaign, Clinton, Danville, Decatur, Jacksonville, Urbana, Peoria, Pekin, and Springfield, Ill., and in central cities of Missouri, including Jefferson City, the state capital. Industrial contracts have also been made with large industries in Kansas, Missouri and Illinois.

By the end of the current year the main pipe line of the Panhandle Eastern and its compressor stations should be finished, the report says. At present the 857 mile main line of the Panhandle Eastern system has been completed from Texas to western Illinois, and the work is proceeding toward completion at the terminus, the Indiana-Illinois state line.

Total assets are reported as $38,008,803. A loss of $44,758 in Consolidated net income is referred to as a gratifying showing, in view of the fact that the company's construction period is rapidly coming to an end.

STOCK MARKET LOSES POSITION AS TRADE SEER

Held to Exaggerate Business Picture.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 24.—When such scaling down of values on the stock exchange recurs as that of the last few weeks, it becomes a question of increasing interest as to what extent the stock market still performs the function of foreshadowing accurately the scope of a coming movement in trade and industry.

That, as a general principle, sustained advance or decline in stocks indicates the trend of industrial prosperity, no one has even denied. Whether it does not sometimes, for circumstances peculiar to the stock market, give an exaggerated and misleading picture of the trade situation; whether, indeed, its prophecy may not on particular occasions be utterly misleading; is another question. The answer to it must be in the affirmative when one considers such not infrequent incidents as the wild and prolonged advance in stocks, six or eight weeks before the panic of 1929.

This matter came forcibly up for consideration last week when the so-

IMPRESSIVE numbers of business heads—more and more in late years—find satisfaction in a Commercial Banking relationship with this institution.

What is gained through a Commercial Banking connection here? Is there anything unusual—especially helpful—in the facilities and service of this bank?

Only this: That men find it easy to develop the personal contacts that make for pleasant and satisfactory banking transactions.

Officers quickly learn the business and needs of each client. They have time to see those who wish to see them, time to match each customer's needs with the facilities of the bank, time to get results.

This personal element—encouraged by compact organization—has characterized The Northern Trust Company for more than 40 years. If it seems valuable to you, you are invited to confer with the banking officers about your commercial or personal account. They will be happy to see you.

THE DIRECTORS OF THE NORTHERN TRUST COMPANY ARE:

A. WATSON ARMOUR, Director, Armour & Company

Continued Low Money Rates Also Favorable.

New York, May 24.—(AP)—Probably the most important event influencing the bond market last week was the meeting on Thursday of eastern railroad presidents at which it was decided to draw up plans for a petition to the interstate commerce commission for an increase in freight rates.

Previous to that the advance in bonds had been concentrated pretty consistently among the gilt edge obligations, but thereafter it broadened to include less desirable rail issues, as a result of which virtually all of the loss of the earlier part of the week in this group was regained by the close.

Any increase in revenues would have a doubly bullish effect on rail bonds. Improved earnings help the credit of any borrower. As the standing of many rail issues as legal investments for saving bank and trust funds is determined in different states by various margins of net earnings available for bond interest, greater revenues would also tend to bolster the demand. Conversely, the demand for many rail issues has been hampered in recent months by the fear that they would not be able to maintain their standing as legal investments.

Seen Favorable Factor.

Continuing easiness in the money market, the latest evidence of which was the reduction in interest rates paid on foreign demand deposits, was a fundamentally favorable factor. Further unfavorable earnings reports of various companies served to check any tendency toward a general recovery among the issues of secondary or speculative rating.

The influence of low money rates on the market was most apparent in the gilt edge issues. United States treasury and Liberty bonds reached a succession of new high prices, a number of which were historical peaks. Ultra high grade corporate liens also moved ahead to new top levels.

At present Wall street is trying to make up its mind what Secretary Mellon will decide on for his next financing. If he decides to float an issue on June 15 a preliminary announcement would seem likely toward the end of this week. The market for government bonds is more favorable than in years, but the demand for short term issues is even better from the standpoint of the government. There are two maturities of certificates of indebtedness totaling $558,000,000 on June 15. Some means of funding the known deficit will have to be provided also.

May Include Both.

The problem is to take as much advantage as possible of short term financing without letting the opportunity to float bonds pass. Hence it seems probable that the treasury's plans will include both short and long term issues.

Flotations of new bonds last week totaled $93,235,000, the largest aggregate in six weeks. Corporate financing, including $53,000,000 in utility issues, assumed a more important rôle than in some time. The majority of these obligations were of high grade in keeping with the preference of investors.

LOOKING AHEAD WITH BUSINESS

"Encouraging signs, confirming the favorable long term outlook for the utility industry, are appearing in various forms at this time," says the Standard Statistics company of New York. "Included are the recent trends of electric and gas production, the relative stability of the telephone business, temporary and, possibly, permanent relief from political oppression, and others. Reassuring, too, as to the financial prestige of the utility business are first quarter earnings reports. Despite obviously unfavorable operating conditions, revenues and income were, in general, well maintained during that interval. Sound reasons exist, also, for believing that this showing can be continued during subsequent periods, and few, if any, dividend reductions are, as a consequence, probable."

An order amounting to nearly half a million dollars has been placed with the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company by the Consolidated Gas, Electric Light and Power company of Baltimore. This order is for electrical equipment to be used in the super-power system of the Safe Harbor Power corporation of Safe Harbor, Pa., and the Consolidated Gas, Electric Light and Power company of Baltimore.

The average prices for crude oil at ten representative fields were unchanged last week from the preceding week at $3.9 cents a barrel, compared with an average of $1.465 a brl last year, according Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter. Gasoline at the refineries also was unchanged at 4.187 cents a gal at four principal refining centers, compared with 7.49 cents a gal a year ago.

Production of airplanes in the United States during the first quarter this year showed an increase of 87 over the final quarter of last year to a total of 672. The number of planes built for domestic civil use was 342, an increase of 89 over the preceding quarter.

Little business in copper was reported at the close of the week. The price held unchanged at 8¾ cents a pound, delivered, in the domestic market with buying light. There was no foreign buying because of the Whitsunday holidays abroad.

Consumption of cans by corn packers in the United States in 1931 is estimated at approximately 11,500,000 cases, compared with 15,250,000 cases last year, by the Corn Canners' Institute. Similar reductions in the pack of other vegetables is expected by the institute.

Corporate maturities next month will aggregate $60,871,940, compared with $123,471,280 this month, and $140,355,940 in June last year. In addition foreign government issues amounting to $19,210,000 will mature next month.

STOCK EXCHANGE LOSES GROUND AS TRADE PROPHET

called "blue chip stocks," the shares whose price went above the mountain tops of 200 and 300 during 1929, were the heaviest sufferers in last week's falling prices. It did not require much thought to decide that circumstances surrounding the fairly recent market history of these stocks were so peculiar to the period, so identified with the mental illusions of ten years ago, as to make even the recent movement of the shares no safe criterion for the financial situation generally.

Performance of U. S. Steel.

What no stock on the list was this conclusion more obvious than with United States Steel, whose decline below par last Tuesday appeared to assist in Wall street the idea that all was lost.

The steel company, it was pointed out, had not for six months been earning the 7 per cent dividend which had been both paid and earned on its common stock since 1926. But the inferences ignored the recent past as completely as the longer past was ignored in 1929. The company's stock had been so immensely increased in 1927 and 1929 that the amount now paid out in dividends at the 7 per cent rate would have represented more than 9 per cent on the old common stock capitalization of 1923 and nearly 12 at that of 1926. The earlier increase of 60 per cent in the stock was merely a distribution of paper certificates to existing shareholders. When that plan first became known, the stock exchange quoted the increased stock "when issued" more than 50 points under the old stock's price; but its practical view of the operation was short-lived.

The Wall Street Illusion.

In the autumn markets of 1927 and 1928 the new stock sold at 160 and 170, as against the 111¾ of January, 1927; then it was pushed to 261¾ in the autumn of 1929. In other words, the exceedingly absurd doctrine that the price of more shares of a given unit automatically made its value per share much greater got absolute control of the excited Wall street mind. The illusion was not confined to "steel"; the same thing happened to the shares of other large companies which distributed paper "stock dividends"; prices for most of them were doubled or nearly trebled between mid and the autumn of 1929, even the actual dividend payments on the increased stock was not changed at all. The present seemingly low price of such stocks as American Can, Eastman Kodak and Ingersoll-Rand, is still due to the average of 1926 or 1927, in some cases far above it, and those were prosperous years for the company.

Follows "Crazy" Inflation.

The simple fact is that we have just lately been witnessing the deflation which follows a particularly crazy inflation of the prices for such shares. It differs in no essential respect from the deflation in prices of commodities during 1921. But the point of real importance is that, whereas the inflation of 1920 affected commodities out of all proportion to its effect on stock exchange values, the inflation of stocks in 1929 was largely out of measure with any undue expansion of business activities or commodity values.

Nothing has been more perplexing in the nineteen months since the panic of 1929 than the question how far our real difficulties are a direct result of that memorable crash and the excesses which caused it, and how far of other causes unconnected with the crash of 1929. Whatever the answer to that question, it has to be recognized that the stock market's unprecedented extravagances had invoked a reckoning for itself greater than trade and industry could possibly have inflicted through misjudgments of their own.

ABANDON PLAN.

The committee acting under the plan and agreement for merger of R. R. Dresser Manufacturing company and Merco Nordstrom Valve company has abandoned the plan because the deposits of stock of S. R. Dresser Manufacturing have been insufficient to carry out the proposal.

PERU PROPOSES TO SEND MISSION ON DEBT PROBLEM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 24.—The Peruvian government plans to send a commission to New York to discuss its debt problems with American holders of its bonds as soon as it has completed its study of the final reports and recommendations of the commission of financial advisers, headed by Prof. Edwin W. Kemmerer, according to a cable received here by J. & W. Seligman & Co. and the National City company, fiscal agents of the republic, from Rafael Larco Herrera, minister of finance.

The communication, forwarded by the bankers' representative in Lima, states in part: "The government believes that it is now in a position to effect certain economies in its expenditures which have hitherto been impossible and it plans to revise its budget accordingly.

"When the government has appraised its situation in the light of the Kemmerer reports, it will send a commission to New York as promptly as possible to discuss an offer to bondholders substantially along the lines indicated in Señor Vinelli's [then minister of finance] letter of March 26, last. The government regrets that meanwhile it is unable to make the interest and sinking fund payments due June 1, 1931, on the Peruvian national loan, first series, bond [6s due 1960] and outstanding in an amount of slightly less than $50,000,000."

Will Devote Unused Rail Property to Free Gardens

Railroad yards beautified by blossoming potato plants and fragrant cabbage patches may be the order of things along the Milwaukee road this summer if a novel plan of the railroad's committee for relief among the unemployed proves successful.

An order has just been issued to all of the road's superintendents to permit former and part time employés the free use of company property not needed for railroad purposes during the growing season to be used for garden plots as a means of providing employment and food. Garden clubs are being formed under the auspices of the Milwaukee road women's clubs at many places along the system. Seeds are furnished free by the club to those unable to purchase them. The growing of root crops is encouraged to provide vegetables for use during the coming winter.

Middle West Utilities Reports Gain in Output

A 10.6 per cent increase in average electricity consumption per domestic customer of the Middle West Utilities system is reported. Revenue per customer increased only 4.4 per cent, reflecting reductions in unit prices of electricity.

ASSERTS CANADA ADDS TO TARIFF TO AID BUSINESS

Banker Denies Policy Is One of Retaliation.

New York, May 24.—(AP)—"It is increasingly clear that the Canadian government has embarked on a definite policy of increased tariffs," Case R. Wood of the Canadian Bank of Commerce said here, emphasizing that this policy is not retaliatory against any country but solely for internal protective purposes.

"The tariff is being used, Mr. Howard said, 'not as retaliation, as some good persons have suggested, but as a means of building up employment, giving business and industry on a more prosperous basis, and of attracting the sound immigration which Canada requires for her fuller development.'

"Canada's tariffs, as well as those of other countries, are certain to occupy the attention of the National Foreign Trade council's convention next week. Among that importance, Mr. Howard, who is manager of the foreign trade division of the Canadian Bank of Commerce in New York, said:

Gives Trade Figures.

"In 1930 Canada's trade with this country was $1,049,000,000, or more than 6 per cent of Canada's total trade with all nations. Imports from the United States were valued at $653,000,000, exports to the United States at $396,000,000.

"The total of British and foreign trade in the dominion in January of this year was $6,575,000,000, of which $2,000,000,000 was United States trade, against America's $3,531,000,000.

U. S. Branch Factories Help.

"It is feared that the development of American branch factories in Canada has recently been particularly significant of Canada's increasing activity.

"In recent months," the banker said, "we have seen numerous reports of increases in Canadian tariffs on imports. Five notable cases are those of the automobile manufacturing industry, the refining of petroleum, rubber boots and shoes, automotive manufacturing plants, or to establish them in Canada."

Montgomery Ward Makes Accident Policy Offer

Montgomery Ward & Co. yesterday announced that it will issue $5,000 accident insurance policies to all adult customers for $1 a year. All Ward customers between 16 and 64 years of age, it was explained, will be eligible, the announcement said, but the policies cover automobile, pedestrian, and farm vehicle accidents. The policies, designated as "cost of progress" policies, are limited to the company's midsummer sale book, now being mailed.
